THE WORLD'S ASSAULTS.

The publisher of the Whig was accused by a local print, recently, of two things, (1) claiming credit for establishing the school of mines here, and (2) of seeking to strangle the enterprise. The Whig asked for evidence in support of these statements and it has not been forthcoming. Why?

The people are assured meanwhile, that if Mr. Whitney and his party get into power at the next provincial elections they will do more than the Ross government has ever done for Kingston and Queen's. What will they do? What have they proposed? What has Mr. Whitney promised? Nothing, and what is more, he will not promise anything. He has not repudiated the assaults of the World, and it counts for a great deal more in the counsels of the party, than the organ of the would-be minister of education in Kingston.

The World, in its issue of the 11th, renewes the attack on Queen's principal, declaring that he is working for a consideration. In a former issue it contended that he was trying to graft Queen's College upon the province, and that he was standing in with the premier in order to save himself from disaster. What disaster is it talking about?

VALUE OF A BOND.

The benefit of a guaranteed bond depends, very largely, upon the manner in which its conditions are carried out. The official of a public or private corporation is bonded as a protection to his employers. In proportion to the amount of money which he handles he is indentured with some company. Before the transaction is completed there is a perfect understanding as to the obligation resting upon each side. The official is required to deposit the funds he receives on a certain day or in a certain way. The money is checked and accepted. The transactions of the week or month or quarter are punctually accounted. The man is not known to be living beyond his means. Everything about him is such as merits the confident approval and endorsement of the employer. These safeguards are expected to be followed, and if, in spite of them, there is a defalcation or a loss the guarantee company must meet it to the limit of its bond; it becomes null and void, however, if its conditions have not been faithfully observed. Or if the employer knows, or learns that the official is guilty of any irregularity, he can loose and unbusiness habits; that he has been exposing himself to grievous temptations, that he has been reported as losing in reckless speculations, and goes or says nothing, he has no claim upon the guarantee company. The bonding of an official and employee does not remove the risk of loss if the employer is conscious that he is guilty of any irregularity, and the sooner some people learn the fact the better.

RE FORMING THE SENATE.

A contemporary complains that the government has been calling only stalwart liberals to the senate, and that, as a consequence, the conservative majority has almost disappeared. Truth to tell the government has aimed to bring this result about. It had its experience with this same conservative majority early incites experience.

A certain case admirably explains this. The Greenway government desired the use of some of the school funds, which are held in trust by the federal government, because the rapid development of Manitoba, and the development of the national school system, involved a larger expenditure than the province could undertake, ordinarily. Application was made to the federal government for relief. It was granted so far as the community was concerned. But the senate was refractory, and, under the guidance of that famous blusterer, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, the bill was rejected. Now Manitoba government, conservative, is asking for the favour which the Greenway government was refused, and there will be some awful wailing if it is denied.

The circumstance is sufficient in itself to show that the senate, as it was constituted, did not act always for the best, and that the first reform was to break the power of this conservative machine. The liberal government is not at all likely to use the senate, with a liberal majority in it, any more than the conservative used it during the many years they ruled and called to the upper house only the representatives of their kindred. The government being relieved of factions, opposition, of even obstructive tactics, will be able to consider measures looking to the future and permanent well-being of the senate.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has had his plans and they have not suffered in merit, however for the time being they could not be adopted.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. James Carr,
Uxbridge, Hastings
Co., Ont.

"About six months ago I had a little boy, two and a half years old, who was in a terrible condition and suffered a great deal from scrofulous sores. My husband bought a bottle of Burdock Blood-Bitters for him and gave it to him, and by the time he had finished the second bottle there was not a sore to be seen. On account of this wonderful cure I can honestly recommend B.B. to all who suffer from any disease arising from bad blood."

CURES SCROFULA.
"About six months ago I was troubled with a bad cold and painful boils, for which could get nothing to cure me. As a last resort I tried Burdock Blood-Bitters. On bottle completely rid me of boils, and in health was never better than at present."

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD.

From Ocean to Ocean.

The people of the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Northwest Territories and British Columbia are now enjoying the blessings that flow from the use of Malt Breakfast Food. Users of oatmeal and other grain foods have given up these starchily and tasteless products and have made Malt Breakfast Food their favorite breakfast dish. A well known citizen of Victoria, B.C., writes as follows:

"Your Malt Breakfast Food before it was sold by grocers here was strongly recommended to me by a relative in Ontario, who was using it every morning with great satisfaction. My wife introduced Malt Breakfast Food some two months ago. It has been of special value to my eldest daughter, whose appetite was becoming uncertain and weak. Malt Breakfast Food has strengthened her digestion and improved her health wonderfully. We have all benefited from use of Malt Breakfast Food, and would not think of giving it up. It is the best and most delightful of all breakfast foods." All live Grocers.

EDITORIAL TIPS.

The Ottawa council is moving for a lower qualification for aldermen. It is now low enough if it is desired that the aldermen should represent something besides their ideals in the council.

The paper association has been declared guilty of a monopoly and down goes the tariff from twenty-five to fifteen per cent. It has still a margin of profit, but it cannot impose upon the publishers.

Dr. Russell, of Brooklyn, who offered his body for vivisection, has not been accepted on his terms. But he has got what he wanted perhaps more than anything else—a first-class advertisement.

The Gazette boasts that Montreal can attract the live industries to it without special bolstering. "It is only the second-class industries," says our contemporary, "that the bonus-giving communities catch." What do you think of that, friends?

The Spectator suggests that the Hamilton library board resign. Having allowed the librarian to get away with $4,000 of the money he drew on library account the board should consider that it has been in office about a year and a half too long.

Mr. Whitney is going to do more for Queen's college than Mr. Ross has done. So his Kingston apologist announces. But Mr. Whitney has not spoken. Mr. Whitney later on can safely deny that he undertook to bribe the Kingston electorate.

Fresh eggs are thirty cents and thirty-five cents a dozen, and Mr. Ryan, in Belleville, ranted away because the Ross government does not provide cold storage and send them to England. The man must have been hard up for something to croak about.

The Telegram is shocked that Chancellor Wallace, of the McMaster college should reflect upon Toronto's granting and monopolistic tendencies. The world honors the man who tells what he thinks without waiting to ask for permission to express it. Chancellor Wallace evidently does not travel in the middle of the road.

THE KAISER'S HEART

And Not His Head Is The Offender.

London, Feb. 13.—The Berlin correspondent of the World writes that Germans of all ranks have been secretly troubled for many months and unable to understand why their kaiser has shown so little sympathy with their own during Kruger. Now they think that they know all. Their kaiser has fallen in love, they whisper, with an English lady, whose name they profess to know, and who married a German subject of the highest rank. They are satisfied that the kaiser's heart and not his head has turned him against the Boers. This is a venial offence compared with that of entertaining the traitor of the tribe.

SOLDIERS ESCAPE.

Three soldiers of "A" field battery, after fully experimenting, have concluded that whole some "grub" and warm quarters, even though they be in the military prison cells, are preferable to wandering over field and road on a cold winter's night.

Guards Pugh and Quenneville and driver McGuigan are thoroughly convinced of the truth of this. Yesterday afternoon, however, after they had escaped, they escaped from Te de Point Barracks cells, where they were sojourning, awaiting trial for desertion. Another deserter, also in the cells, refused to leave his comfortable quarters and remained, while his three comrades "broke jail." The escape was simple: The lock of a door was smashed, and the deserters went through a small back yard and climbed over the wall, leading to Cataraqui bridge.

The three men were missed not long after they had escaped, and the whole battery was turned out to scour the city and vicinity. A man driving a gig gave the information that he had seen the escaped soldiers near the cotton mill. For hours the search was kept up, but to no avail. However, at about a quarter to ten o'clock, the missing men arrived back at the barracks and gave themselves up. They had made a wide detour of the city of Cataraqui and there decided that it would be better to return. The trio no doubt feared to strike across the ice to Cape Vincent, as they would have been too much exposed to view.

NOT YET RECOVERED.

R. J. Vair's horse and cutter, stolen from the yard in rear of the Windsor hotel on Tuesday, have not yet been recovered. It has been stated that two men took the rig from the yard and drove westward up Princess street. They were traced as far as Cataraqui.
