A LITTLE TORY WHINE. A contemporary is deeply concerned about Mr. Pense's attitude on the prohibition question. "He generally has iews which he acquires in various ways," says the critic unconsciously and unintentionally paying him a compliment which the Whig would like to reciprocate, but cannot while the memory of that Pelleville speech remains. "Has he (Mr. P.) not acquired any view on the question of prohibition or on the referendum," it is asked. Yes, and in due time he will express it. The prohibition question was not under review at the annual meeting of the Reform Association or Mr. Pense would have spoken upon it. By the way he is a supporter of the government's policy, and it can tery well be understood; where he stands upon the issue. The man who is mystery-and wants to remain it if he can is Mr. Whitney. He is dumb on the subject, and so are his supporters and his organs. Why? What are they afraid of? A CALL FOR ECONOMY.

It has been suggested that the as sessment of real estate in future raised, so that a larger revenue taken from taxation without an apparent raise in the rating. This not relieve the ratepayer. He still be the burden-bearer. The only reasonable increase can come from the growth of the city, and the assessment for some time has not been commen surate, in its development, with the demands that have been made upon the city and the expenditures they have entailed. The assessment commission, in its report, recommends the assessment of real estate at its true value, and the assessment of all incomes up on a sliding scale which is calculated to make every one pay according to his means. The recommendation may not become law, and may never be Yard and Sec. o given legal effect. Real estate may be seen, and levied upon, but income a hard thing to get at and the na tural indisposition is to resent the enquiries that may be made respecting it. Prospective changes in the law, and prospective changes in the mode making the assessment, will not, however, improve the present cirgumstances of the city, which are dis tressing enough, financially, and for economy in every direction.

CHANGE IN THE SENATE. In the memorable debate upon the membership of the senate committees have decided to leave the prohibition Sir Mackenzie Bowell made the sur- question to the judgment of the indiprising announcement that never, at vidual members. Those who thought least since he had entered the upper the order would go campaigning after chamber, had the question of politics the government will be greatly disapinfluenced him in his appointments. pointed. And yet in twenty-eight years a liberal had not been a chairman of a standing committee in the senate. He peet much from Mr. Richardson's ingot on the committees because he dependent and political reform movehe had not a place of honor. Now all room for political reforms, but the that is changed. The senate commit- movements to secure it invariably tees have liberal chairmen and the house is so evenly balanced politically that there cannot be any more obstruction for its own sake. would be a good time in which to ask for a change in the Act of Confederation, so that the senate can never again become the registering machine of any political party. The original intention was, according to the recorded sentiment of the late Sir John Macdonald, to have the politica parties so represented in the senate that they would be able to judge partially and judicially upon matters that came before teem. For many years that idea was deliberately abandoned. It ought to be revived and made legal and binding The Globe suggests, since the senate NEW BRICK HOUSE, WELLINGTON ST., appears to be a fixture, that it by opposition would disown and repuupper chamber may be made to serve not at all willing to a useful purpose in expediting public jury. Perhaps in future he will business. The Canadian people naturally reluctant to yield power to any body not directly amenable to popular vote, and the wisdom of that attitude does not require demonstration. "But some sphere of usefulness," says the Globe, "should be found in which the judicial position of the senate could be utilized. It now deals with divorce bills, and as such matters have no connection with party questions, its attitude is judicial as as its functions. While the substitution of the senate for a court law in dealing with divorce may not be regarded as a success, it suggests sphere of usefulness for the senate that should be considered by constructive statesmen. It may be found possible to transfer to the senate some business now taking up the time the commons, without in the least relaxing popular control over course of legislation." The senate has to adjourn occasion ally because it has nothing to do contingency ought to be got be given more work when they are willing to do it in their own way

The Whitney banquet - the de monstration which was calculated to show how popular the leader of the opposition is-is declared by the fervative press to have been a great

The public expressions of the party do not get rid of the fact that Mi Whitney has not been a complete success. He has not led in any destructive attack upon the government, though The Tory, which was organized to say what the conservative press generally dare not, plainly intimated that the policy that attracted was constructive and that J. Phiny Whitney balked on it.

Another circumstance cannot be ignored, namely, that some one cise has been thought of as leader, some one with more dash than Mr. Whitney, and some one, as Mr. Maclean remarked, who will start the people cheering. Mr. Whitney holds his place simply because there is no one else in sight, who is willing to accept it responsibilities, or who is wanted by the workers, and a man can stand only a limited amount of adulation, under these conditions, without embarrass-

The Star pictures the banquet as a sort of revival of Belshazzar's feast There was revelry by night, but in the midst of it there was a scene. Mr Whitney had declared that Mr. Ross had got himself into a stew and he could stay in it, that the opposition would not keep him out. In other words the conservative party would avoid the agitation, and on the walls appeared the awful enquiry written in big letters and by an invisible hand, "What are you going to do about prohibition?" It is an issue which Mr. Whitney cannot dodge. He must speak upon it, and he must vote upon it, and by both he will be judged.

EDITORIAL NOTES. Mr. Whitney is going to be peutral on the prohibition question, if he can. He wants to stand in with all parties on this question. If he keeps on he will be repeating Mr. Marter's blun-

Mexican Railroad Plans.

New York, Feb. 24.-Railroad circles are deeply interested in the trip of E. H. Harriman, who left to-day for the city of Mexico. The coincidence of Harriman's Mexican trip at this time, when Paul Morton, of the Atchison, is there, gives rise to the belief that the transcontinental rail roads, especially those in the south west, are looking out for Mexican connections. The Mexican Central, from I.l Paso to the city of Mexico, is reported for sale, and it is expected that Mr. Harriman will personally look over the reilroad situation in that territory.

New Trial For Mrs. Botkin. Washington, D.C., Feb. 24 With the reconvening of the United States supreme court, to-day, interest is re vived in the celebrated Botkin murder care of San Francisco, as it is announced that the attorney-general California will this week make a motion before the court to dismiss the appeal in the habeas corpus feature of the case. Representative Coombs, of California, on behalf of Mrs. Botkin, will consent to this, in order that proceedings for a new trial may be begun in California. It is expected that the court will, according to precedent, grant the motion. Mrs. Cornelia Botkin was, in 1898. tried in San Francisco and found guilty of the murder of Mrs. J. P. Dunning and sentenced to life imprisonment. A box of poisoned candy was sent from San Francisco, to Mrs. Dunning, in Delaware, and the crime fastened upon Mrs. Botkin.
