WHAT CECIL RHODES SAID.

Princess. London, March 6 .- The Cape Town papers, which have arrived here, contain details of the trial of princess Radziwill on the charge of forging the name of Cecil Rhodes to a number of notes for a large amount, Mr. Rhodes testified that he met the princess at a dinner in London. She afterwards wrote and asked him to invest £200, 000 for her. Mr. Rhodes replied that it was against his rules to advise his friends in such matters, but he commended Mashonaland railway de bentures as a good investment Rhodes said he saw the princess a se cond time on board of a ship where she asked if she might sit at his table. Mr. Rhodes denied that he either wrote or signed any of the letters produced on her side. They were all typewritten and he said he did not use use a typewriter. He paid her bills at the hotels while she was living in Cape Town, on condition that left the country, but she returned The princess brought with her a let ter of introduction from marquis of Salisbury to lord Milner.
