Klansdigger began his journey with only a quart of water and two pounds of crackers in the sack with him, this being a condition of the wager of $300, which caused him to make the perilous trip. When released Klansdigger was nearly blinded by the dust which had crept into the sack, and his throat and mouth were so parched that he could hardly speak, his little cask of water having been spilled after he had been on his journey only a day. For nearly three days he had been without water, and he stated when he was able to talk that had it not rained Wednesday, he would certainly have died of thirst. During most of the storm the car in dred and seventy-five thousand pounds | Later the United States wished to which he was packed was side-tracked out in some small country town, and the water came through a crack in the roof and fell on the sack. The burlap became quite wet, and he was thus enabled to suck from the cloth a few drops which allayed his thirst.

They did not desire to create dissension in the party professing opinions in regard to the war with which they could not associate themselves. They thought it better to make an organization to promote principles of a different kind in connection with liberalism. Referring to Right Hon.
