SHE PATIENTLY BORE DISGRACE

A Sad Letter from a Lady Whose Husband Was Dissipated.

How She Cured Him With a Secret Remedy.

"I had for years patiently borne the disgrace, suffering misery and privations due to my husband's drinking habits. Hearing of your marvelous remedy for the cure of drunkenness, which I could give my husband secretly, I decided to try it. I procured a package and mixed it in his food and coffee, and, as the remedy was colorless and tasteless, he did not know what it was that so quickly relieved his craving for liquor. He soon began to pick up flesh, his appetite for solid food returned, he stuck to his work regularly, and we now have a happy home. After he was completely cured I told him what I had done, when he acknowledged that it had been his saving, as he had not the resolution to break off of his own accord. I heartily advise all women afflicted as I was to give your remedy a trial."

THIS REFORMER HAS BEEN A DISAPPOINTMENT.

Politics in New York Are Disturbed—Sympathy For Marconi—It Will be War to The Knife In Manila.

(Whig Correspondence, Letter No. 1,295.)

New York, March 14.—The royal representative of one of the greatest European nations, whose sons and daughters have come to us by millions and who, renouncing the citizenship in the land where they were born and had their hearth stones in our midst, and who have chosen for their future homes and elected the citizenship of the United States as the government to which they give their allegiance against all the world has been awakened to the fact that "Aud Lang Syne" still lives in their hearts and its broadest hospitality with feast, song and wine greets the brother of the present emperor of Germany with everything good that a mortal can enjoy and a royal welcome resounds through the length and breadth of the republic. His coming in a stormy time. The outside greeting was most unwelcome, but never touched the heart of those German millions that came out to greet him in the winter's storm. When this letter reaches you his royal highness will be battling with ocean storms on his way home. We already know with what pride his countrymen will receive him back to his native land, to which he will undoubtedly bring volumes of good report. But what of the aftermath? Is there to be no return for the millions of dollars expended and the good will manifested. Oh, yes, there is, indeed, something better. Good will is worth something and undoubtedly that is going to tell to America's reputation in the future.

It is almost laughable when you think of it to see our American nobility chasing the nobility of other lands. The steamship in which the prince departed was loaded with the best blue blood in the United States actions of the kind of our American nobility. I hope they will have a good time and I wish them, prince and all, "bon voyage."

Politics in New York are disturbed. Our governor has promised a clean and pure government and he has begun to give evidence that he will keep his word. He has taken the sheriff of Kings county by the neck and thrust him out on the charities of a cold world. Mr. Guden, lately elected sheriff of Kings county, had made a bargain with one Michael J. Ledy, another all-around politician, that he would surrender all the fees of his office above $12,000. Mr. Ledy, beside being a good all-around politician, like a couple of his democratic friends, ex-mayor Van Wyck, of the Greater New York, and Hugh McLaughlin, of Brooklyn, the maker of kings, queens, aldermen, scrubbing women and street sweepers, cultivates the quality in common between himself and Van Wyck, ex-mayor of New York, a valuable quality in politics, that he knows a good thing when he sees it. Not long ago Mr. Ledy, being as able to see as deep into a millstone as any other politician, who could not see any deeper than he did, forecast his political horoscope, and saw at once that his democratic friends were going to sweep Kings county with a new broom.

Shivory Mike, red-headed McGovern, one-eyed McGinnis and bow-legged Patsy united in pronouncing the vision which the wise man revealed to Mr. Ledy as being true as "preaching to the choir" as Irish whiskey. No doubt Mr. Ledy was elated; he could read his title clear to mansions in the clouds. What he dreamt of might have been true twenty-five years ago or two hundred and fifty years to come, but it was not to go in 1902, so he notified the corrupt republicans, his old time friends, whom he knew from A to Z that he washed his hands from the corrupt republican party after their election in sack cloth and ashes; he resolved to act with a virtuous democracy to sustain the principles of the immortal Jackson, who had sworn by the big boat that the union must and shall be preserved, and with that great party he was going to act forever and forever more, but there was a hitch somewhere and the grand idea foretold by the years did not pan out quite as well as expected, so with a flip flap, three somersaults, an Indian whoop and a hand-spring he got back into the republican party and resumed without stopping for his old place as chairman of the executive committee. And what did the virtuous republicans do? They gave Ledy a political option on his old place; so no wonder that the reformers grew hopeful of victory in the middle of the fight. The republicans were hopeful, too. They thought they had the victory, as the miller had the cat, but the cat saw a rat and so slid away like republican hopes.

The sorrowing reformer refusing to be comforted there is one thing measurable certain and that is that one party or the other is sure to lose and that the proverb of a thousand years ago is still true. "That a house divided against itself cannot stand," and that it is mighty necessary to try and carry water on both shoulders. It is a lamentable state of affairs that men chosen to illustrate the grandest principles of human government should disgrace the proud position to which their fellow citizens have called them and sell their glorious birthright for less than a mess of porridge; the heart grows sick at the contemplation. Is there no such thing on earth as an honest man? The astonishment that our people received the news that the English government opposed the advanced ideas of Marconi's invention, hearing that it might interfere with the work of the admiralty now in operation to determine whether this new form of telegraphic discovery was really a truth or a fallacy. Marconi himself acknowledges that the work is yet in its infancy, but nevertheless it is a grand truth and that time in the near future will vindicate his work. The British government have stopped him, nevertheless, from working on British soil, but some of the most substantial capitalists of the age have determined to see him through this in a new manner, a cloud like many others who operated in unknown fields before him that just now he is on a streak of bad luck, but there is a good time coming, so wait a little longer. It is true he has lost in the field of a very beautiful bride and a considerable pile of money, but he has patience and pluck, the grandest elements of success, and the world may yet hear of him which may win for him a large stock of happiness in the future.

Looking toward Manila the vision is not quite so hopeful as it was six months ago, and the president has determined instead of withdrawing troops from that part of the world to public to strengthen that arm of our military force. The cruel torture of a force of military prisoners captured by the savages has changed the whole feeling of the government toward these people. It must be war to the knife and the knife to the hilt. There is no other way if civilization is to be vindicated, and the most brutal savagery which acknowledges no obligation to God must perish by it.

There appears to be a very considerable difference of opinion of the wisdom of the president's course with regard to his daughter, Alice Roosevelt. The young lady has grown rapidly toward the point that he has forbidden his daughter to go abroad to attend the coronation of king Edward, though as yet no such command has been issued by official authority. One of the most interesting features of the raid on the gamblers still continues in active operation with unabated fury. Our district attorney, desiring to maintain any action that will destroy the gamblers' dens. Thousands of young men, who were once honored and respected, it is claimed, have been lured to ruin, and he will fight the devil with fire till this city is redeemed from the curse which has received the protection of men who are paid to destroy it. Gambling houses have been found within six doors of a police station and all the police of that precinct failed to discover the character of the house, which was well known to boys who played marbles on the sidewalk. Women's gaming dens have become the common thing, and they have taken the money given to them by their husbands to provision the house and have gambled it away for a hopeless gain on stocks. Through this course honest wives have become mad shopkeepers; consequently husbands and children have encountered disaster and ruin, and from the toils they find it difficult to escape, except through the gates of death, which is a bitter pill that the Almighty will bless them with deliverance. At a gambling den on Sixth avenue there were forty-two women, two men and a hundred and eighty-two dollars in cash captured, besides the layout which was carried to the corporation yard and destroyed. The congregation was made up of many women, apparently respectable mothers and wives, who touched their noses with the soiled hands of the golden harvest watching for victims after dark. When brought before the magistrate some were lined and others, apparently respectable, for whom it was the first time they were discharged by the magistrate with a severe admonition. The last batch was detained for presentation to the grand jury as 'the most hopeless of their kind, whose future lives will oscillate between the midnight sidewalk and the prison; then the pauper's grave in Potter's field, which closes the account.

The murder of the ancient millionaire Rine has attracted the attention of our criminal court, and his valet who finished the terrible assassination, still wears the countenance of an innocent witness though he appeared covered with the stain of blood from the sole of his foot. He comes into court each morning with a look as innocent as the new-born babe, but we grow nearer the principal criminal, who has forged papers enough to give him the entire fortune of the state, every day. Val Jones is the man who has been discharged and his attorney, Frederick House, made his habeas corpus application to that effect, which was promptly denied by our recorder, and he will have to abide the result of his crime.

HOW MORMONISM SPREADS.

Canada And Scandinavia Regarded as Good Fields.

The newspapers of Copenhagen say that the Mormons have energetically resumed their missionary work in Denmark, says a recent article in the New York Sun. There are now over a hundred Mormon missionaries in that country, their work being supervised from their headquarters at Copenhagen, where they publish a newspaper organ. Thousands of tracts and books are being constantly sent out from this center to supplement the work of the missionaries. The Mormons in the United States have contributed an important sum of money toward the building of a Mormon church on a piece of property that has been purchased in Copenhagen.

The Mormons have always regarded Denmark as an exceptionally good field for their operations. A few years after our state department, in the days of K. B. Hayes, sent out the famous circular warning foreign countries against the efforts of Mormon missionaries, on the ground that Mormons persistently violated the marriage laws of this country, all Mormon missionaries were excluded from Denmark. In the past few years, however, it being understood abroad that the practice of polygamy no longer characterizes the Mormon church, the missionaries have been permitted to renew their labors.

There never was a time when the Mormon church put forth greater efforts to win converts to its faith than at present. Bishop Joseph Binker, one of the foremost Mormons in Utah, said in 1890 that at that time the church had 1,523 young men employing in various parts of Europe and America in Mormon missionary work. He said the church was engaged in the greatest missionary labor ever undertaken by a religious body. He said that the church expected in 1901 to have at least 3,400 missionaries busy in the field.

President Snow, of the Mormon church, declared in the same year that by 1910 he expected that the own root of the church would be expected to have at least 3,400 missionaries in the field. Every Mormon missionary is expected to proclaim loudly that to-day plural marriages are not sanctioned by the church. This fact is undoubtedly helping them to gain converts. In the early years of their proselytism abroad the missionaries tried to induce at least all the young converts to emigrate to Utah. They are not so active in that direction, though they are very glad to have their church in this country reinforced by recruits from abroad. But their main idea now is to build up the church in all lands, so that it may take its place as one of the great churches of the world. They, therefore, do not care so much for large immigration to Utah or the other western states in which their church is stronger, as they do for the conversion of the masses of the union and in all the countries of the earth. This is the ambitious scheme to which their energies are now devoted; and it must be said
