KING'S FIRST COURT

Was One of Great Surpassing Brilliance

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE

A CANADIAN GIRL PRESENTED To ROYALTY.

Few Changes in The King's First Court—It Surpassed All The Victorian Drawing Rooms—The Supper Was an Innovation.

London, March 15.—The scene at the king's first court at Buckingham palace last night, is spoken of by today's newspapers as one of surpassing brilliance. Never before had the king looked so kingly, his breast blazing with orders and stars. The queen wore a golden yellow dress embroidered in gold. Her jewels were pearls and a dainty crown of diamonds.

Miss Twining, a Canadian girl, presented by lady Strathcona, was attired in a lovely dress of Limerick lace. There were fewer changes in the king's first court than busy bodies in society journals had predicted. It was an evening instead of an afternoon drawing room. As the king and queen stood by themselves, only two courtesies were required, the other royalties behind them not being saluted.

Presentations were made in the ball room instead of the throne room, where the work of the decorations has not yet been completed. The ball room has been re-decorated, and is a much more stately and convenient room for great functions than the throne room.

Another innovation was supper with hock cup, champagne, hot bouillon, cold meats and ice. The court was more brilliant than the Victorian drawing rooms owing to the change of hour and the electric lighting of the palace. It was a large court, too, to which every one present had been specially invited.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Licensing Of Butchers.

Kingston, March 15.—(To the Editor): I would like, through your valuable paper, to call the attention of the workingmen's association of the city to the recommendation, in the finance committee's report, to increase the license fee, to sell fresh meat, from $2 to $50. If such were done all the small dealers would have to close up and the business would be thrown into the hands of a few large dealers, which would mean an increase in the price of that which is a staple article on every poor man's table.

In these hard times the necessaries of life should be made as cheap as possible, especially meat. No burdensome tax, such as a license fee of $50 should be imposed upon the sale of such an article of diet. The power to impose a license for the sale of fresh meat was never intended for revenue purposes, but merely to regulate and control the business, and a $1 charge would be as efficient, for that purpose, as a $50 one.

No monopoly in the necessaries of life, should be the motto of every friend of the poor man.—ANTI-MONOPOLY.

Extradition Proceedings.

At Watertown, N.Y., Arnold Cranston, formerly of this city, had his preliminary hearing on a charge of having forged the signature of his father to a note for $116.48, made payable to the order of G. M. Macdonnell, and was held for further extradition proceedings, bail being fixed at $500. The proceedings will be submitted to the secretary of state for approval and if sustained Cranston will be extradited and stand trial here on the charge. The only controversy in the case was whether or not the defendant's father had given the son permission to use his (the father's) name in the note. There was not sufficient evidence that Walter S. Cranston gave his son authority to sign the note in question though there was proof by the defendant, his wife, and father-in-law that the defendant had been given permission by his father to use the name of Walter S. Cranston to at least one other note.

To Be Brought Up Again.

The Felix Lennon dismissal case has not yet been disposed of. It will be brought up again at the next meeting of the city council, in a motion that he be appointed fireman at the water works pumping station. This will require only a majority vote to carry. A petition, praying that this be done, will be presented to council, and it is said that it will bear the signature of 2,000 names.

THOSE BEETLING STEEPS.

Men Hazard Lives For Eggs But Not For Soul.

By a Banker.

In impressive grandeur and picturesque, stately sublimity, perhaps the numerous islands, the detached seagirt columns and pyramids of massive rock, and the lofty upreared perpendicular islets forming the Orkney and Shetland islands, surpass any similar rocky coast line in any other quarter of the globe.

For aeons past, exposed to the furious assaults of the wild Atlantic, these mighty beetling cliffs frowned down upon the boiling surge which ever hurls itself against those adamantine munitions of rocks; though where the hard serpentine has at length succumbed to the impetuous onslaught, carving out of the mass great caverns, into which the hurtling, foam-crested billows launch their seething waters, with the roar of detonating thunder. And, as wave follows wave, the one, rebounding from the inner ramparts, meet the other at the mouth of the hollow with appalling impact, flinging volumes of boiling spray high in air, then, in its turn, rushing into the recesses of the deep, sea-hewn cavity, to be again driven back like its fellows. And so this giant battle between the herculean forces of the ever restless ocean and the passive resistance of those stern and sullen cliffs ever proceeds, and will continue until time shall be no more, or until the last of those upheaved rugged steeps at length succumbs to the never ceasing impetuous onset of the angry deep.

Yet though these lofty upreared bastions are so terrible and so awe-inspiring, yet will men, with a courage altogether amazing, lower themselves by ropes from the very summit in search of sea-birds' eggs. Driving an iron crowbar into the rock, to which is affixed a stout rope, they lower themselves over the dizzy precipice, perhaps a thousand feet above the roaring sea beneath them, and, long pole in hand, collect the eggs resting on the numerous ledges and cavities.

It is related that on one occasion one of these brave egg collectors, while standing on a flat ledge midway between the sea beneath and the summit above, by some means lost hold of his rope, which swung back out of his reach. Sheer above him was the overhanging rock; several hundred feet below him the foaming Atlantic breakers: To climb the inaccessible precipice was an utter impossibility; to attempt to descend would be certain death; for even if by a miracle he could reach the shoreless base of the perpendicular rock his fate would be the same. And there the poor, horror-struck man stood; doomed either to die of starvation, or, if a tempest arose, to be thrust off the narrow ledge on the wings of the wind, and hurled into the watery abyss beneath. And there, only a few feet out of his reach hung the rope which he had lost.

At length, realizing that he must either clutch that rope, or die, commending himself to God, with all his strength he springs off the ledge into the yawning void, and grips hold of the rope.

And though men will hazard their lives for the sake of a few eggs, how few will risk even a little fancied inconvenience for the sake of their immortal soul. They are standing on the ledge of a deathly precipice, and unless rescued, will lose the life eternal. But one, who died to make reconciliation with heaven for them, is standing with outstretched, scarred hand, ready to help them if they will. Oh, why will they not grasp it, and be saved?

TOMATOES FROM CANADA.

St. Louis Firm Gets a First Shipment of Vegetables.

St. Louis, March 15.—The Adam Roth grocer company has recently imported a stock of Canadian tomatoes. Concerning this innovation John Roth said to the Commercial: "In a business experience of more than fifty years we have recently had the unique experience for the first time in our history of purchasing tomatoes that have been grown and packed in Canada. This we believe is the first and only importation of canned tomatoes into the United States.

"Heretofore there has been no difficulty on the part of our canners to pack sufficient tomatoes to supply the demand, but owing to the drouth last year there was an abnormal shortage in the crop, resulting in a serious scarcity, to overcome which every means known to modern commerce was employed, tomatoes being shipped in from Colorado, California and lastly from Canada. The duty of forty per cent. on canned tomatoes is practically prohibitive at all times, but the unusual high price of the domestic canned article this season made it possible to import the foreign pack for the first time in many years. The total importations will be a little over 10,000 cases."

Montreal Star.

W. E. Davis, the passenger traffic manager of the Grand Trunk railway system, belongs to the Hays regime, which has done so much to rehabilitate the road in every branch of the service, from road-bed to parlor car, from equipment to speed and punctuality, until to-day the Grand Trunk is admitted to be one of the leading systems of the continent in so far as efficiency of management, service and earning powers are concerned. The fast limited and express service between Boston, Montreal and Chicago and the west, including the international limited, between here and Chicago, are amongst some of the well-known trains which have been organized and successfullly operated since Mr. Davis assumed his present position. Edelweiss.

Ola Moore in Christian Work.

God loves His mountains, on the height
The day dawns first,
When from the eben cave of night
The sunbeams burst.
And there in amethyst and gold
The dying lights
Fall softly when the day is old,
God loves His heights.

Last touch of beauty, there He set
His edelweiss,
To gem some mountain crescent
Of snow and ice.
So near the stars those rugged crests
Have dared to rise,
Perchance the blossoms on their breasts
Fell from the skies.

Though life be often bare and bleak,
With sacrifice,
God grant to us, as to the peak,
His edelweiss.
Some starry blossom in the snow
That chills us here,
By whose white token we may know
His skies are near!

Warning To Local Merchants.

The Canadian Printer and Publisher for March contains the following paragraph which will no doubt be of interest to local merchants: I am informed that the two big departmental stores in Toronto, namely, Eaton's and Simpson's, are going in for spring catalogues far beyond what their previous ones have been. For instance, they are going in extensively for colored illustrations, so as to illustrate fabrics of all kinds, including carpets, etc. This is intended to scoop in as much trade from the town merchant as possible, and if what I hear of the catalogue is true, it would not surprise me if more business than ever were brought into the city. My advice to advertising managers in town and country offices is to warn live merchants in their own towns of the coming competition and get them to go in for more home advertising than they have previously done. If they have been in the habit of getting out catalogues for district circulation, and this is common in smaller places, it might be well to urge them to spend more on their catalogues. In this way the printing of them could be better done.
