> A PERTINENT QUESTION. Churches.

The Brooklyn Eagle puts this question and in discussing it declares that though churches are more poorly attended and supported to-day than in the past, there has been no concomitant decay in morals or decline in the religious spirit.

One says the falling away is due to the loosening and lowering the standard of doctrine, that it is evolution and the higher criticism which are doing the mischief. Another insists that the loss of progress is due to the too great rigidity and obscurantism of a church which refuses to acknowledge that the world does move and to adjust itself to the world's progress, / None of these explanations go deep enough. If the world fails to hear the church it can only be because the church has either lost or misstated its message. Haman nature is the same as it was in the first century or the sixth. BEHEE'S HAIRLESS HEAD.

Wilkes-Barre, March 18.-William, or "Paldy" Behee is one of Wilkesborn without any hair on his head, and at the age of fifty he is still wireless telegraph station in Cape without any. His head has always been as smooth as a billiard ball. When a younger man Behee visited nearly all the prominent physicians in the country to see if they could make hair grow. All the doctors said it was a remarkable case. A noted French specialist, while on a visit to this country, heard of Behee's case from a New York doctor, and came here to see him. He remained for half a day with the Wilkes-Barraman, examining his head. Upon his return to Paris he wrote for Behee to come to France for an examination, promising to pay all expenses, but he declined. The latter had an idea that the French doctor wanted to place him in a museum, but wented to exhibit him to the medical school of Paris. A trip was also contemplated to Berlin and Vienna. A young man one time came near losing his life on account of Behec's bald head. His name was Michael Gough, a barber's apprentice in th shop of Alexander Schwartz, in this city. When Behee was a young man he did not mind going around Wilkes-Barre minus his hair, but when he went out of town he was very particular about his personal appearance He purchased a wig from a New York importer, who got it from a house in London. Whenever Behee went out of town he always wore the wig. This changed his appearance altogether One day he was going to New York and stepped into Schwartz's shop to get a shave. Young Gough's chair was the only one empty. He had never met Behee before, having come here from the country. Behee thought he would have some fun with the young man. He told him he wanted a hair cut. The young men turned to get a pair of scissors, and as he thid so "Baldy" snatched the wig from his head and threw it over in the corner of the room. When Gough turned around again and beheld Behee's bald head he fainted and fell to the floor. He was removed to his home, where he remained for some months. At one time it was thought he would not recover. He seemed like a man in delirium. He would be seized with convulsions and cry out Oh, see that man's head, he has no
