IT WILL NOT INTERFERE

IF OPERATIONS ARE SUCCESSFULLY CONTINUED.

And This It Likely to Be. The Case—Smallpox. Situation is Well in Hand—The Chosen Friends in Session.

Toronto, March 25.—No action can or will be taken by the government to prevent the transfer of a controlling interest in the Sudbury nickel mines to Mr. Schwab, of the steel trust, and his associates. The matter is simply a transfer from one American company to another, and so long as the mines are continued in operation there will be no interference. The probability is, in fact, that the output of nickel will be greatly increased.

The smallpox situation is well in hand, now. The lumbermen coming out of the woods are being held at various points and thoroughly inspected, and their effects disinfected. These precautions will, it is believed, prevent any further outbreaks in Ottawa and Hull. In western Ontario there is great improvement. Tilbury East, in Kent, had forty cases, which have all been cleaned up now.

The grand council of the Chosen Friends began its deliberations this morning at Association hall, the 321 delegates in attendance representing over 22,000 members. Grand council for McCannion and the other officers presented their reports, showing an increase of 3,772 in the membership during the year and urging the necessity of increasing the dues of the older members to the standard paid by the newer members, as favored by the speaker of the association, H. Mrs. Gillespie was married but once, and all her children were born within twenty years preceding the death of her husband, Col. William Gillespie, Virginia. Fourteen pairs of twins and the seven other children besides were born before the civil war, and then William Gillespie enlisted with the confederates. During the war and but a year before the death of her husband in the battle of Vicksburg, the fifteenth pair of twins was born. How the widow brought up her enormous family is not explained. "All but a few lived," she says, "and as soon as they were old enough to care for themselves, I had to let them go and seek a living. I don't know where they are. I did know, but my memory is not as good as it once was. They do not know where their mother is, except one, and he does not come. Perhaps they will look for her some day. I do not know."

LIGHT ON TWEEFOUNTAIN.

Telegraph Clerk Sentenced To Two Years.

London, March 24.—Gen. Sir Leslie Rundle is on his way home from South Africa. The troops who came to grief at Tweefontein, were part of his force. The Central News correspondent at Pretoria says that the Boers, after the camp was rushed, would not have got off with their booty but for a lapse of duty on the part of a telegraph operator. Gen. Rundle, directly he learned of the affair, wrote a message for Eland's River camp, ordering up the Imperial light horse. The operator, however, declined taking the message, stating that he was worn out with extra duty. Two valuable hours were thus wasted, the message being sent by mounted men.

The operator was subsequently tried by court-martial. He said he had been thirty hours on duty, but that did not save him from a sentence of two years imprisonment.
