fair in Kingston. The Buffalo Express claims to have positively identified Karl Dullman, who with three others is serving a life sentence in Kingston penitentiary, for attempting to blow up the Welland canal at Thorold in April, 1900, as Luke Dillon, known thirteen years ago as a friend of Dr. Cronin, a leader in the nationalist movement and prominent in everything looking to the alleviation of the Irish. It was given out two years ago that Dillon had sailed for Europe and had been drowned. It is said this was a ruse to conceal Dullman's identity.

John Nolin and John Walsh dropped dynamite cartridges in the lock at Thorold on the evening of April 21st, 1900, and the explosion did great dan-The two men were arrested a few hours later, with Dullman, who was proven to be the ringleader, and who received the same sentence as the other two. The plan of destroying the canal was frustrated by the agents entrusted to commit the crime, for they drank so much on the day of the explosion they were unable to be anything but fatally clumsy. It was shown, however, that thousands lives would have been lost had the plan succeeded, and on this the sentence of life imprisonment on all three was imposed.

The resemblance between Dullman in 1900 and Dillon in 1889 is very striking, and is the first evidence of the identity of the two. The only difference is that which one would expect, considering the difference in the age of the two.

A number of people have identified Dullman with Dillon, and there seems to be no doubt at all that they are correct in their statements. The identification has been blocked by his friends, who did not desire that it should be known that Dillon was in the waterway at night.

The penitentiary authorities are quite surprised to learn that a story is affoat that Dullman was said to be an Irish leader named Luke Dillon. There was nothing developed there they say to give potency and reliabil ity to the rumor. To be sure there is a well marked impression among the officers that the name of Dullman is assumed. It is quite the antithesis of what the man really is. He is regarded as a man of superior attainments, and, whoever he is, the government has made a good catch and has a dangerous man under lock and key. Dullman is now cracking stone in the prison yard. He does it with a his purpose elsewhere and which land ed him in Canada's greatest penal institution. He is very tractable and does his task with willingness. He is uncommunicative; has apparently no friends, sees no one who takes an in-section of the prison.
