GENTLEMEN NOT WANTED

In Land of The Eagle—American Idea Not Exalted One.
London, March 31.—The Pall Mall Gazette, William Waldorf Astor's paper, publishes a letter from its New York correspondent, who says: "Editors here suggest, and they ought to know, that there is no need for gentlemen in this country, and they are certainly represented to the public as a lot of embroidered, dancing, aimless fops, who have no necessary place in a land where everyone is expected to work for a living."

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. (Alderman) White Expired Last Evening.
Citizens were painfully shocked this morning to learn of the sudden and totally unexpected death of Mrs. J. T. White, yesterday. Mrs. White attended both morning and evening service in Sydenham street Methodist church, and was apparently in good health. She had nearly reached home in the evening, when she was taken ill, finding it difficult to breathe. She was removed to her home and a physician summoned, but despite the best medical care, she quickly sank and shortly after nine o'clock her spirit passed away.

The deceased was born in the county of Peterborough, a little over fifty-nine years ago. Her brother is identified with the customs service there. Forty years ago last Christmas she was married to Mr. White, with the following children, survive: Major W. J. H. White, this city; Dr. White, of Denver, Col.; and Miss Lillie White, trained nurse in a hospital in Lowell, Mass.

Two Codes of Morality.

Harper's Weekly.
Gather ten honest and reputable men and form them into a gas company, and the chances are that within a month they will try to buy the common council; gather a hundred God-fearing people and form a church and in proportion to its vigor as an organization will be the need of a restriction of its power; gather a multitude of people and form a nation and organize a government, and the richer and bigger the nation grows, the more its government will tend to a course of conduct regularly by consideration of the main chance. Why is this so? It is not in a measure, because we have one code of morals for the individual and another for the group?

Teaching And Practice.

"There was a great display of millinery in the churches yesterday; the shops down the street were totally outdone. The woman who could not boast of a new Easter hat and suit was virtually told to 'go way back and sit down.' The man who could not admire a chunk of cloth decorated with a dab of colored ribbon and a feather, might as well have stayed at home. To any one who viewed some of the church scenes those lines which fell from the lips of a litton, the meek and lowly Nazarene, sounded very odd and out-of-date: 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on.' 'An' who take ye thought for raiment?' etc.

THE ATTRACTIONS BOOKED.

Monte Cristo, Herrmann, The Great, and Lovers' Lane.
The Toronto Globe says: Judging from the large audience present at the Princess last evening and the repeated curtain calls, accorded James O'Neill in his presentation of Dumas' masterpiece, "Monte Cristo," that production has lost none of its popularity.

The scenery throughout, and more especially that of the conservatory and ball-room, was superb, and seldom equalled by any travelling company. From the first act until O'Neill, as Edward Dantes, is unjustly accused, through the wonderful scene of the stormy sea, and again when disguised as a priest, the play never flags. Mr. Frederic de Belleville, as "Norton," shares the honors with Mr. O'Neill, and is still the same suave, polished actor as we remember him when playing in Mrs. Fiske's company. Miss Selene Johnson, as "Mercedes," played a careful part, her best effort being in the fourth act in the magnificent ball-room scene, when she recognizes Dantes as her long lost husband. The company altogether is a capable one, and the presentation of the piece such as leaves nothing to be desired.

"Herrmann, The Great."
The great and only Herrmann, the most expert adept in the art of magic the world has ever seen will mystify and delight theatre-goers at the Grand on Wednesday. Herrmann is a name that is synonymous with all that is mysterious and awe inspiring and most mystifying and incomprehensible feats of magic are performed by him with a charm of manner and running fire of wit that would lure a confirmed cynic into admiration. For his present engagement he brings many new novelties. Several sensational illusions, as a table being raised, a man being suspended by him have set all America talking.

"Lovers' Lane."
William A. Brady sends to the Grand on Tuesday one of the strongest and most popular attractions, "Lovers' Lane," of which every body interested in the theatre has heard, is by Clyde Fitch, a most prolific and popular playwright. It has been played by its present interpreters, since the first week in February of last year, and there is no other play in this country that can make that showing. "Lovers' Lane," enjoyed a tremendous vogue in New York for five months, immediately followed by a record breaking all-summer run in Chicago.

Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride was very becomingly attired in a gown of white organdy, with orange bloom, in her hair, which had been sent direct from Florida by her uncle, Dr. Smith. After the ceremony a very elegant lunch was served to about thirty guests. The bride and groom, the recipient of many handsome and valuable gifts. Conspicuous among them was a magnificent ostrich plume, which had arrived from South Africa the evening before, sent by her father, E. A. Ferguson, of the last Canadian contingent, who had just reached that far-off land. The bride's going-away gown was of fawn colored cloth, with short waist of cream colored satin. The happy couple left in the afternoon train for a trip through the eastern townships, carrying with them the hearty good wishes and fervent prayers of many sincere friends.

A LAW UNTO HIMSELF.

Every Man Must Be That, to Retain His Health and Digestion.

THE GREAT HUXLEY.

There are thousands of people in this world who eat meat from one year's end to another, and certain savage tribes in Africa and Polynesia are almost exclusively meat eaters; but while there are thousands of these there are millions who live upon a mixed diet of meat, vegetables and grains, and if numbers is a criterion, it would seem that a mixed diet is the best for the human family.

The fact that you will find many vegetarians who appear healthy and vigorous and eat more equally well, and any number of robust specimens also eat both meat and vegetables and anything else that comes their way all goes to show that the old saw is the true one, that every man must be a law to himself as to what he shall eat and drink.

To repair the waste of tissue in brain workers as well as to replace the muscle and energy of the laborer, can only be done through the process of digestion. Every nerve, muscle, fibre, ever-drop of blood is extracted from the food we eat and digest.

In these days of haste and worry, and artificial habits of life, scarcely one person in a thousand can lay claim to a perfect digestion; dyspepsia is a national affliction. The great English physician, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most effective remedy for this is a national affliction.

Most cases of poor digestion are caused by failure of the stomach to secrete sufficient gastric juice, or too little hydrochloric acid and lack of pepsin, and all of these important essentials to perfect digestion are contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in convenient palatable form.

The great English physician, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most effective remedy for this is a national affliction.

One or two of these tablets taken after meals insure perfect digestion and assimilation of the food, and laxative medicines have no effect whatever in digesting food and do not call such remedies a cure for dyspepsia as far as food is concerned.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain pepsin free from animal matter, dextrine and other digestives, and not only digest all whole-some food but tend to increase the flow of gastric juice and by giving the weak stomach a much needed rest bring about a 'healthy condition of the digestive organs and a normal appetite.

Nervous, thin-blooded, run-down people should bear in mind that drugs and stimulants cannot furnish good blood, strong muscles and steady nerves; these come only from wholesome food, thoroughly digested; a few tablets of Stuart's Tablets take after meals, for a few weeks will do you more good than that drugs, stimulants and dieting combined.

Henry Kirkpatrick, of Lawrence, Mass., says: "Men and women whose occupation requires an active but exhausted life should make it a daily practice to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals. I have done so myself and I know positively that I owe my present health and vigor to their only use."

"From the time I was 22, when I graduated from school with broken health from overwork, until I was 26, I scarcely knew what it was to be free from stomach weakness. I had no appetite whatever for breakfast and very little for any other meal. I had acidity and heartburn nearly every day and sometimes was alarmed by irregularity and palpitation of the heart, but all this gradually disappeared after I began using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I can not say I had not known since I was a 'growing boy.'"

Mrs. Jan Burton, of Toronto, Ontario, writes: "For eighteen months I suffered from what I supposed was bladder and kidney trouble, and took medicine from three different doctors without any sign of cure. I felt as ill as I had been—unable to do my work."

"I thought I would try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and so if they would make me feel better, I gave up drinking tea and coffee and after only three or four tablets had been taken all the old troubles disappeared and then I discovered I had been treating me for kidney and bladder trouble and one of them treated me for rheumatism."

"My digestion is fine, my complexion restored, my nerves for dyspepsia, but I am so thankful for finding a cure so quick and so pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I am surprised at the change they have made in my life."—Thomas S. Smeal, Mayfield, Calif.

"I have used and recommended Stuart's Tablets because there is nothing like them to keep the stomach right."

E. H. Davis, of Hampton, Va., says: "I do not know how long I have been a doctor for some years, but I discovered in two months I got more benefit from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, than in five years of the doctor's treatment."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is probably the most powerful and successful digestive agent ever made. It is sold by druggists everywhere in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.
