Exits At The Opera House. The matter of proper exits from the opera house was argued before police magistrate Duff this morning. City so licitor McIntyre pointed out that doors leading from the stage swung inwards, whereas the act says they must swing outward. "We want the open door." was the diplomatic remark of Mr. McIntyre. On behalf of the opera house com pany W. F. Nickle and R. E. Kent appeared. They stated their willing ness to do everything possible to make the building safe, but declared these doors could not open outward as that would prevent waggons coming up the narrow passage for or with scenery. The matter was enlarged for a week, until the architect's opinion was ob-tained. Mr. Nickle pointed out that there were already more doors in the house than the act required.

A FRENCHMAN'S TRIBUTE To Cecil Rhodes-Article By Capt

Chartrand. Capt. Chartrand, Royal military college, who contributes a daily article to La Patrie, of Montreal, published on Tuesday the following 'An eminent Englishman, Cecil Rhodes, died a few days ago. Like all men, who dared to say and to act, he made enemies, who do not disarm even after his death. Many of his countrymen attribute the Boer to him. To foreigners, he was greedy adventurer, the fatal and auspicious filibuster, the highway robs ber, who handled unserupulously the South African regions in his interest. And yet that man has the bulk of his immense fortune to used in the education of his own people. But his enemies still reproach him for that action, as being the posthumous attitude of the man who wants to blind posterity.

" I have lived fifty years. I love my own people. I have shown proofs of that many a time. But I impardividual, whoever he may be. The one who acts and works may have failings-we all have but if his do ings are of some value, I congratulate am a human being before anything.
