KINGSTON'S APPEAR-

ANCE COULD BE IMPROVED. The City's Front Doors Not Attractive - The Commercial Value Of Municipal Art-Improvement Associations.

To all people of taste and to those who are alive to the new movement on this side of the Atlantic in behalf of the city beautiful, it is gratifying to note the large number of outdoor art and civic improvement associations that are being formed, especially in the United States villages, towns and cities, and which are doing splendid work in the way of removing eyesores, beautifying home and school grounds, developing small parks, etc. Unfortunately, an appeal, to be effective to a large proportion of the public, must have a commercial side to it; but, fortunately, municipal art has very practical as well as very esthetic features.

Many instances could be cited where art has been the direct means of enriching a community; for instance, take the little town of Perugia, situated between Rome and Florence. Years ago the artist, Perugini, painted the interior of its merchants' exchange with a series of pictures in fresco. Later the commerce of Perugia dwindled away to nothing, but those paintings remained, and became a source of immense revenue in the throngs of tourists who came to see them. To-day Perugia has a new lease of life and is becoming prosperthrough the large amount of money left to its hotel proprietors, merchants and others by the visitors who come and pay homage to those

Again the vast sums spent by poleon in transforming Paris into the most beautiful city in the world have been returned many times over by the thousands of tourists and others who annually make Paris their Mecca, attracted thither by its beauty as a city, by its art galleries and by its advantages as a centre for students of art and music and for fashionable shopping. The vast plans now taking for making Washington the world's most beautiful capital will doubtless lead to a like return in business Advantage for the millions of dollars the improvements will cost.

The many tourists who leave the trains to take the Richelieu & Ontario boats every summer at this point are certainly not favorably im pressed by the surroundings. A point of great possibilities is the K. & I railway station. Inside the building some interest has been shown by th growing of plants, but the outside grounds, with the exception of a little grass, have never had anything done to improve them; and lately a lot cinders have been dumped there, leav ing the place in a disgraceful condition. Being opposite the city hall, the parks committee should take an interest in matter, and urge on the new management the work of im provement. With a general cleaning up, sodding between the tracks where practicable, judicious planting shrubbery and laying out of flower beds this could be made a beautifu station ground and more worthy o the noble city building opposite which stands as a lasting monume to the public-spirit of our citizens

They would not only be satisfying their love of the beautiful, but would be doing a work almost akin to philanthropy; would be educating the public and helping to make the city a better place to live in. Some Of Their Number Added To Committees-Not Known Yet On What Date The Celebration Will Be Held.

The Victoria day celebration committee met in the city council chamber last evening to confer with the trades and labor council as to the part the labor unions would take in the demonstration. Six of the labor representatives were present: Messrs. unions would do all they could to make the affair a success. They were unable to tell fefinitely what the unions would do regarding a procession, as all the organizations would have to meet to discuss that matter. However, this would be reported later. It was probable that a union procession would be held, as a trades procession would not cost much.

The trades and labor representatives were asked to add some of their num ber to the sports and music committees of the celebration, and did so as follows: Sports, Messrs.
