Optimist or Optimist.

CATERING TO ONE'S NEEDS.

This is a most utilitarian age, and we see the evidence of the fact every day. Here follows is the revelation which a day's perusal of the papers produces:

The book lovers have no longer to seek the libraries for the choicest of reading. The books are brought to the door, and the catalogues, and one has only to intimate his wants in order to be supplied with the latest literature of every kind.

How many people study the weather, or the weather probabilities? Not many, and so the hurried man is often caught away from home, without protection from a shower, and in great danger of getting his clothing damaged.

What a whirlwind of opinion there was in the Easter gathering of the educationalists in Toronto! The papers contained columns of reports, which reflected very feebly the tempests of talk that occurred in most of the departments.

There is no limit to the development of the helpful spirit. The idea is that a large service, systematically sustained, costs less than a fragmentary service, that is dependent on the individual and his wants.

MR. WHITNEY'S NONSENSE. The leader of the opposition proposes, with the help of the electors, to do prodigious things.

Supposing the pulp mills run steadily and using up all the pulp wood, they can handle the supply in Ontario will last for over 900 years.

institutions and charities which must be maintained, the government would be in distress, in financial pain: all the while, and yet Mr. Whitney would build five or seven agricultural colleges more in the province.

A VERY SUGGESTIVE THOUGHT. Cecil Rhodes, in his will, and in the directions which it contained respecting college funds, incidentally gave his beneficiaries some good advice.

There are exceptions to every rule, and exceptions to the average experience of the average teacher. Cecil Rhodes had his mind's eye upon the people who live among books, and judge people, their manners, and their methods, by what they read therein.

A SPLENDID SERVICE

Soon to be Given Over the K. & P. Railway.

C. W. Spencer, general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific railway, was here to-day in his private car. Interviewed by a Whig reporter, he stated that the work of improving the K. & P. railway would be begun at about May 1st, and a large sum of money would be spent in putting the line in first-class condition.

On June 15th, the new time-table will come into effect, and much better time and connections will be made. "Then we will give Kingston a splendid service," said Mr. Spencer, "and bring a large amount of travel over our lines to the summer resorts here. We will also draw much United States travel by the 12.40 train which will be put on. This will be a fine connection for the Thousand Island steamboat company's vessels. By these improvements we expect to acquire much Kingston travel also. Heretofore the land connections at Sharbot Lake prevented this, but now the new 12.40 train will make close connection there with the Montreal-Toronto express. Then a close connection will also be afforded at Renfrew with the Imperial limited to Vancouver."

Mr. Spencer also stated that in the Ottawa district about 100 miles of new rails will be laid on the C.P.R. The Smith's Falls division will have 80 pound rails to replace the 72 pound rails now in use. All this work will give employment to a vast army of men and will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Mr. Spencer is a most genial man, and always pleased to give any information about the railway which will interest the public.

A CONSPICUOUS FIGURE.

Lieut. Bruce Carruthers May Have Been Paroled.

There is a possibility that Lieut. Bruce Carruthers' fighting days in South Africa are over. Taken prisoner the probabilities are that he was released on parole, and that being so, he will be relieved from further duty and return home. It is this so Lieut. Bruce will likely come, via London, and attend the coronation ceremonies of the king. He would be a conspicuous figure in the Canadian contingent.

We suggest late press comments. Toronto News: Canada, too, has written the name of Bruce in letters of gold on the page of her history. Toronto Star: The Boers rode up to the Canadians "confidently calling them to surrender," but Lieut. Carruthers explained with his pistol that it was not a sum in simple arithmetic that the Boers were working at just then.

Hamilton Herald: Every man of the survivors deserves the Victoria Cross. Hamilton Spectator: The more we hear of that fight the better we like it. Boston Herald: The remarkable stand of the Canadian rifles at Doornbaat farm, would seem to suggest another poem after the manner of the celebration of the charge of the light brigade, at Balaklava. The main obstacle in the way of realization of the suggestion is the fact that Alfred Tennyson is dead and has left no successor.
