THE DAILY WHIG.

Some of the conservative papers in other places have caught up the cry made in Kingston for an obvious purpose...

HITTING ITS FRIENDS. The Hamilton Spectator repudiates L'Evenement and its pro-Poor sentiments.

The royal visit to New Brunswick last year cost $22,273.37, or at the rate of $1,200 an hour.

The conservative leads say. Look after the lists? Get the names of voters on. No objection to that.

Mr. Calvin voted with the government in the budget discussion. He could not vote for such an absurdity as Mr. Borden proposed, higher protection and a reciprocal preferential tariff within the empire.

Mr. Marter, a good conservative, and the leader of his party for a time, says: "I am sick and tired of having public men called thieves and robbers."

Here's another picture for which Mr. Whitney has been posing: "I pretend to no more virtue than my friends, but I say, if the day ever comes when the conservative party wants to succeed by means of corrupt practices, it must get another leader."

Negro Millionaire Dead. Philadelphia, April 11.—Col. John McKee, one of the wealthiest colored men in Philadelphia, if not in the country died last night.

Further Information Wanted. The Toronto Globe printed a picture of a man 102 years old, Murdoch Macrae, of Kingston, who drinks half a pint of whiskey every morning.

PENCHANT FOR DIAMONDS

INVITED TO RIDE AND WEAR THEIR DIAMONDS. One Widow Accepted the Invitation and Mourns the Loss of Her Jewels—Was "Doped" and Left by the Roadside in an Unconscious Condition.

Butte, Mont., April 11.—Mrs. Minnie O'Grady, a widow is under arrest on a charge of grand larceny. Mrs. O'Grady gave her friend some medicine for rheumatism. A few minutes later Mrs. Proulx became sick and desired to return home, but Mrs. O'Grady, she alleges, took her out into the country where she left her by the roadside in a lonely place, after taking away all of her diamonds, valued at several thousand dollars.

The smallness of the Mail's criticism passes understanding. It is a sample of what may be expected from time to time as the election campaign proceeds.

EDITORIAL VIEWS. People are asking, What is Mr. Whitney's policy? It's time he gave it out.

How many people know where the nearest fire alarm is? How many could reach it direct should a fire occur?

The conservative leads say. Look after the lists? Get the names of voters on. No objection to that.
