The Feeling In London. ON WEDNESDAY EVENING. April on Saturday night, the duke of De-GRAND OPERA HOUSE in a Grand exchequerer; Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, and William Brodrick, secretary of state for war, held an informal meeting at day. This started a fresh crop of rumors, the most prominent of which is that the Boer representatives, having concluded their conference at Klerksdorp and arrived at Pretoria, had communicated to Gen. Kitchener certain proposals, which the latter telegraphed to London, necessitating immediate consideration by the ministers. Mr. Chamberlain was at the colonial cffice, Sunday morning, which was an exceptional event, and still more unsual, he had an audience with the king at Buckingham palace, after his majesty returned from morning ser-SALES AT PRIVATE RESI-
