MILNER AS PEACE AGENT.

THE KING HAS CHOSEN A MOST CAPABLE MAN.

He Was Formerly a Newspaper Man—Then He Drifted Into Politics—Much Now Depends Upon Him.

In the press despatches telling of the efforts to adjust peace relations between the British and the Boers in South Africa, the man most prominently mentioned as being the claims of the British side of the controversy is Sir Alfred Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa.

King Edward could hardly place this difficult mission in better hands. In mental make-up and in experience Sir Alfred is well adapted for the complicated and delicate task.

He comes of a good family. His grandfather on his mother's side was once governor of the Isle of Man. As a young man Alfred was given a liberal education. He studied in Germany, in King's college, London; in Balliol college, Oxford; he was honorable fellow of New college, Oxford, and barrister in the Inner temple in 1881.

Coming out of college Milner was attracted to journalism, or, as Mr. Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, once said, "deviated into the seductive by-path of journalism" under the auspices of John Morley.

This experience occupied three years of the early life of Milner, from 1881 to 1885, during which he was engaged on "The Pall Mall Gazette" and other leading journals.

His journalistic experience gave him a taste of public life, and in 1885 he stood for parliament. Though he was defeated, his conservative opponent was elected by an exceedingly small majority, where previously the majority had been large.

Mr. Goschen, one evening in the Oxford Union, of which he was formerly president. Among the speakers that night was young Milner, and it is related that Mr. Goschen was so much impressed with his ability that he had heard "an undergraduate talking like a statesman."

This favorable impression bore fruit for during two years succeeding 1887, Sir Alfred was secretary to Mr. Goschen, after which he was promoted to under-secretary of finance in Egypt.

Considering the complicated state of the finances when the English assumed control of Egypt, the office to which Sir Alfred Milner was called was an exceedingly important one. But he saw more than mere figures. He saw everything of those discouraging conditions and of the prospects, and in 1892 told much of what had come to his notice in his book, "England in Egypt."

Milner said in his book, "he would be a fool who, sitting in the finance office in Cairo, in a position of command, is not constantly reflecting upon the conditions and needs of the people." Milner saw and profited by his observations.

For three years he stayed in Egypt. Then for five years he was chairman of the board of inland revenue. It was while performing his duties in that office that he was called in 1897 to become governor of Cape Colony and high commissioner of South Africa.

It was a call to a difficult task. His friends said to him: "We don't know whether to congratulate you or not, you are going to an ugly business." Then the character of the man asserted itself.

Do not congratulate me, certainly. Do not congratulate me, even if they have to wait forever, until I have done something to deserve them. But still less condole with me, for no man is to be pitied, whatever happens, who in the best years of his life is not only permitted but is actually called upon to engage in work into which he can throw himself with a single mind. A public servant must go where he is wanted. It is stringent, but it is the duty of a man of that kind of business to which he is most willing that all his energies shall be devoted.

We get some idea of the standing of Sir Alfred Milner among the high officials of Britain by the manner in which they bade him Godspeed as he was about to leave England for South Africa.

On March 27th, 1897, he was tendered a farewell dinner in London by 125 friends. The chairman of the banquet was H. H. Asquith, late home secretary. To the right sat Arthur Balfour, John Morley and Mr. Goschen.

Chairman was there, too, and in an address paid compliments to the man who was shortly to cut such a conspicuous figure in South Africa. Milner's qualifications for the position were thus summarized by Mr. Asquith:

To have studied scholarship and metaphysics under Jowett and Green, the art of writing under John Morley, to have been introduced into official life by Mr. Goschen, to have learned the practice of administration under Lord Cromer and the discharge of the delicate and responsible duties which fall to the permanent head of a great department of the state under Mr. Balfour and Sir William Harcourt is as unique as it is fortunate. It is indeed an experience eminently calculated to equip a man for the discharge of the most arduous duties which the state can call upon any of its citizens to discharge.

In a letter of regret read at that March dinner Lord Rosebery said of Milner that "he has a brilliant past and he has a still greater career before him, for he has the union of intellect with fascination, which makes men count high."

"He has a velvet touch and an iron will," wrote an Oxford friend of Sir Alfred.

Such is the man who is endeavoring to bring about peace in South Africa between his government and the Boers.

HORSEMANSHIP IN WAR.

Misuse of Mounts Explains British Yeomanry's Defeat.

London, Trunk. The following letter from a gentleman who has had an extensive experience with the imperial yeomanry, throws useful light upon the waste and loss then brought about by a matter of only one degree less importance to the taxpayer than the supplies connected with the purchase and

It served for sixteen months in the yeomanry in 1901. We performed an unusual amount of trekking even for that country, as we left Cape Town by road and 'demonstrated' through the mountainous parts of Cape Colony during March, April and May, 1901. On the conclusion of each day's march the horses were tied together in line—troops of thirty each—head-stall to head-stall, and the flank or end horse was then brought round and tied together, so that the whole troops formed a circle with their heads inward. When thus fastened they were led out of horse camps. One horse would throw his head up the better to catch his food, while the one next to him wanted to rest his nose on the ground; and thus during feeding time a constant tug-of-war went on between the animals all round the line, resulting in their kicking one another, wasting a great part of their food, and constantly breaking their head-stalls. But the worst result of all was that the horses could never lie down, for they remained with their heads thus tied together from their arrival at night until the trek was resumed next morning. In those days the men in the ranks carried everything they possessed on their horses and their average weight would not be less than eighteen stone all, imagine horses marching for weeks and weeks thus mounted, unaccustomed to the country, and never able to lie down!

If you protested to your troop officer, as I did more than once, against such insane measures, you only got an insolent reply, which usually condescended you to the lower regions. My own horse, which I took with me, was a sagacious and faithful chum, who would answer to his name in the dark, and whom nothing could stampede. During my time at sentry go and stable guard I used, to surreptitiously loose him from the other and tie him to a bush or knee-halter him when there was no bush at hand, so that he had an opportunity of lying down. Owing solely to this he served longest in the company, than any other horse, with one or two exceptions, and the exceptions were only owing to the riders in those cases copying my plan.

My English horse served me nine months, in which time we marched two thousand miles, and ultimately I let him to recuperate in a remount camp.

Don'ts. Don't quarrel with fate; it's foolish, for you can never win.

If you're a man, be manly. If God made you for skirts, then let men's wear alone.

Don't pet your dog when things go well with you, and when they are crosswise. Dogs have feeling, and loyalty, too.

Don't be a bad copy of a good thing or a great person; you shame your original and placard yourself very foolishly.

Don't enquire. It's had form and worse policy.

Don't brag of your capacity. To drink like an animal or eat like a glutton gives glory to a fool, than any other horse, with one or two exceptions, and the exceptions were only owing to the riders in those cases copying my plan.

My English horse served me nine months, in which time we marched two thousand miles, and ultimately I let him to recuperate in a remount camp.

Don't be too "frank," a deal of spite and malice hides under that word.

Flippancy is never clever. Although persons laugh at what you say, it is because you are so silly, not at its wit.

Don't sponge. A great love and a true friendship can be killed by over-tending.

Don't write froth to man, nor sentiment. If you ache for experience, write a book, which will probably never be seen outside of your family.

Don't read until you consider it worth while to remember at least one thought or deduction of the author.

Don't look over your social inferiors, or they will cease to be that while you do it.

Don't tell social lies before the kiddies, then punish them for playing truant from school or telling your original fairy stories.

EMBARRASSED LUMBERMEN

SUDDEN BREAK UP OF WINTER CAUSED LOSS.

A Good Share of Logs Will Have to Remain in the Woods—The Recruits For the Fourth Contingent.

Toronto, April 18.—The crown lands department has received word that the early break up of winter is embarrassing the lumbermen as the streams are already falling, the frochets on the rivers having occurred before the ice was out of the lakes. It is estimated that ten or fifteen per cent. of logs may have to be left in the woods.

The following recruits passed the medical examination to-day: James E. Royle, Montreal; William Stevens, Robert D. Dempster, John Scott, William Q. Bragg, James H. Downell, Wesley J. Williams, Toronto; Ashton E. Fish, Linwood; Albert Lambertes, Walkerton; Charles A. Wheatley, Henry W. Gordon, Charles B. Hooker, Fred. A. Weir, Thomas Spanton, Toronto.

Removing From Cataragui. Cataragui, April 18.—The ladies of the Methodist church held a sugar social at the parsonage on Tuesday evening, which was well attended and in every way successful. The village was well represented at each of the recent organ recitals in St. George's cathedral. Mr. Bowden, late of Pittsburgh township, who has recently purchased the Northmore property, has moved to the village with his family and has opened a very creditable store. J. E. Letherland, township treasurer, who recently purchased the property of Mrs. Connolly, does not take possession until the end of the month. Mr. Haycock will occupy the brick house on the hill, owned by Mr. Danlop. Mrs. Benjamin Haycock, ill, has so far recovered as to be able to walk around a little, and soon expects to move to her new home, situated near Picton. Mr. Northmore will have an auction sale soon, and immediately after, the family will move from the village. Mr. Hooper, ill, is in a very low state. Miss Connolly, on the sick list, is recovering. Another son at Mr. Blair's. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have returned from their wedding trip. Miss Van Luyven and Miss Alcombrae have returned after some months' absence.

An East Indian Name For Ham. Philadelphia Evening Telegraph. A Philadelphian who has just returned from an extensive tour through the maharajah's principality, tells us that he was one of the principals. He was one of a party at a banquet tendered to the maharajah of Pervia, at which nearly one hundred guests, representing every branch of Indian life, were present. As special guest, he was seated on the left of the Indian potentate. During the meal he noticed that the letter parook of some fine maharajah had been placed on the table. It was contrary to the Indian caste rules to eat any portion of a pig, he, without a thought, asked his highness how it was he was eating ham. The maharajah, looking at him, then turning around to his body servant standing at the back of his chair, said: "What am I eating?"

The servant instantly replied, "Mutton, sahib, and without referring to an incident upon the maharajah continued his meal.

After the banquet the Philadelphian related the incident to an Indian judge, and the latter said: "If that servant had said 'ham,' he would have been headless before to-morrow morning."

Matched And Despatched. Smart Set. A number of letters entertained at dinner a number of eminent contemporaries. Professor Smythe and Prof. Browne, who were seated side by side, were oblivious of each other's presence, while absently devoting themselves to the vands before them. Professor Smythe, being rather sensitive, presently became cognizant of the attention he was inviting. Crushing his emphy for the time being, he turned to his adversary, and, in a most engaging manner said: "Browne, my head rings; can you account for it?"

For a moment professor Browne's brows contracted, this courtesy and intimacy contended. He smiled indulgently, as he replied: "Naturally, it is hollow."

The silence became oppressive. Finally it was broken by professor Smythe, who asked: "And does your head never ring, my friend?"

"Never," came the response. "Ah," reflectively, "so I thought. It is cracked!"

And each philosopher applied himself, diligently, to the course before him.

On Friday morning he said mass in the convent chapel and then left for Kingston by the N. & P. train at ten o'clock. Rev. P. T. Ryan accompanied the archbishop to Sharbot lake. His grace came to Renfrew to fulfil a promise he had made to visit sister Eusebia, superioress of the convent, who is a cousin of the archbishop.

ELECTRIC BATTERY IN MAN.

Converted by Lightning Stroke Into Human Dynamo.

Snooquahanna, Pa., April 18.—Anybody who shakes hands with Henry Longman, of Summerville, Pa., gets an electric shock of confounding power. Henry is a genuine electric man. Three years ago, while feeling tired, he was struck by lightning and has ever since possessed the queer power of transmitting an electric shock to everything he touches.

By passing the blades of a knife between his thumb and finger during the process of a storm he charges the metal so strongly that heavy weights can be lifted. When flies alight upon him they drop dead, and when he is in a dark room his eyes shine like incandescent lights.

Whenever a storm approaches Longman becomes so strongly charged with electricity that it is dangerous to touch him. He never has any inconvenience, except that he dare not go near a moving locomotive for fear of being drawn against it and killed.

DOCTOR LEADS DOUBLE LIFE.

Indiana Man Sent to Jail on Charge of Bigamy.

Marion, Ind., April 18.—Dr. Norton Smith and a woman who has been living with him as his wife since she came here two years ago, were arrested on an affidavit of Sarah Smith, Saginaw, Mich., who alleges she was married to the doctor at Wawawash, Ont., February 4th, 1873 that four children were born to them, and all are living. She alleges that the doctor has been sending her money for the support of herself and children since he came to Marion, and neither have ever been granted a divorce.

Smith and the woman who claimed to be his wife, were arraigned in court and pleaded guilty to the charges. They were fined $22.50, and given a short jail sentence. The doctor gave a check for the amount of the fine, and both were then taken to jail. Dr. Smith and the woman have been active in church work here, and were received in good society.

Gillespie-Bennett. Willetsholm, April 17.—A large number of the relatives of both bride and groom met in the beautiful home of Mrs. Robert Bennett, Willetsholm, on the evening of the 16th inst., at eight o'clock, to witness the marriage of their youngest daughter, Miss Jennett to John Gillespie. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. E. Oliver. The bride's sister, Miss Sarah was bridesmaid, and Frank Atkinson groomsmen. The two sisters looked lovely, dressed in white, and their resemblance to one another is very marked. A beautifully laid table and a beautiful supply of the very best edibles was a welcome and pleasant sight for the guests. After supper a pleasant evening was spent in conversation, music and games. About two o'clock the happy couple started for their own home, which is the next farm, with the good wishes of all the guests. A large number of valuable presents testified to the popularity of the bride among her many friends.

Mrs. Mary Ling, Dutton, has entered suit against Dr. Robert Jordan, veterinary surgeon, Dutton, for $5,000 for breach of promise of marriage. He had attended her sick cow, she says, when he fell in love with her.

Apply This Test To Your Nerves.

If You Have These Symptoms Your Nerves Are Weak and Exhausted—You Can Get Well By Using Dr. Chase' Nerve Food.

Nervous diseases are little understood. They have long been shrouded in more or less mystery by the medical profession. Many who are fast falling victims of nervous prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia think that they are merely not very well, and will soon be around again—so ineluctable is the approach of nervous diseases and nerve collapse.

Study these symptoms. They are for your guidance. You may not have them all, but if you have any of them your nervous system is not up to the mark, and a little extra expenditure of nerve force may bring the dreadful downfall.

Intolerance of motion, noise and light; twitching of the muscles of the face and eyelids; fatiguing sleep, and dizziness and jerking of the limbs, dizziness and flashes of light before the eyes; irritability and restlessness in every part of the body, headache, indigestion, feelings of weakness and depression, and loss of interest in the affairs of life.

So long as the daily expenditure of nerve force is greater than the daily income, physical bankruptcy is certain to result sooner or later. Nerve force must be increased, and this can best be accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because it contains in concentrated form the very elements of nature which go directly to form nervous energy. Nervous diseases do not right themselves. They come on gradually as nerve force becomes exhausted, and can only be cured when the nerve force is restored.

No treatment for nervous diseases has ever received such universal endorsement by both physicians and people as has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Mrs. Crapper, 37 Salem avenue, Toronto, says:

"For the last two years I have been a great sufferer from paralysis of the right side, which has confined me to the house. On recommendation of friends I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that this treatment has proven of very great benefit to me. I realize that my all most will not disappear in a few weeks, but I have improved so much already that I believe a continuation of this medicine will entirely cure me."

Is the present of Chase's you will find hundreds of earnest letters testifying of the wonderful benefits derived from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It is a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Johnson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
