Major T. F. Umphelby, commanding the fifth Victoria mounted rifles in South Africa, in a letter to a Kingston friend, pays a great compliment to the work of surgeon-Capt. A. E. Ross, who spent nine months with his rifles. The writer says that the medical attention Dr. Ross gave to the wounded at Baffels-poort, on the night of June 12th, 1900, could not be too well spoken of, and that he showed a THE keen knowledge of soldiering on many patrols in the enemy's country. Major phelby is the Australian officer who recently presented surgeon-Major Duff with a pony. Speaking of the doctor, the Australian says the takes things much more calmly than most medical men.
