A SERIOUS PROBLEM

Deaf and Dumb Couple's Substitute for a Door Bell.

New York Evening Post. A young deaf and damb couple who were married recently, and began housekeeping in a flat, have found their greatest difficulty in providing some substitute for a door-bell. The Agents and Their Colors-The doorbell stready in the building they found, of course, entirely useless. They consulted all married friends Cataraqui, May 22.-Nomination pand acquaintances among the deaf peared that all of them had either about that company and supposed to be intended to help along the speculation in the stock. He characterizes, as the description in the stock. He characterizes, as the description of th touch had to be relied upon to show them when a visitor was at the door. The first idea that occurred to the couple was to remove the bell and hang to the clapper ribbons that would wave whenever any one pressed the button, but this would do no the ribbons, and it scarcely seemed worth while to mount guard over it at all hours. Then some one suggested fastening a vial of oil of peppermint or attar of roses to the "buzzer," so that it would spill a few drops when it moved. The sense taste, so far as they could devise could not be made available in any way. Just at present a carpenter is making for the flat a sort of sounding box, in which the vibration of the old bell will be so multiplied as to be perceptible by the sense of feeling to the delicate nerves of the deaf. At least they hope this will prove a so-
