Back Ache? It's Your Kidneys.

Mrs. Frances W. Gresham, Secretary and Treasurer Higher League of Educational Society, Washington, D.C. Says She Was Permanently Cured by WARNER'S SAFE CURE.

A Trial Bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, the World's Greatest Kidney Cure, Sent Absolutely Free to Every Reader of This Paper.

Thousands, both men and women, have kidney disease and do not know it. It is hereditary. If any of your family in this or past generations have been troubled with kidney disease of any form you cannot be too careful. Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, rheumatic gout, inflammation of the bladder and urinary organs are caused by kidney disease neglected. Diseased or weak kidneys cause more trouble and complications than any other sickness. If the kidneys become diseased and are unable to do their work properly, the liver becomes affected, then the bladder, the urinary organs, the blood and the stomach. The blood becomes impoverished, the urine becomes muddy, and it will have a brick dust sediment if it stands for 24 hours, the liver becomes torpid and pains in the back are almost constant as the system becomes prostrated with the disease, the stomach is rendered unable to digest the food properly, the result is a general breakdown.

CURES

Warner's Safe Cure will purify and strengthen the kidneys, kill the disease germs, prevent the serious complications that are bound to arise and restore perfect health.

Made Her a Well Woman

I firmly believe that I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure. For two years I suffered with kidney trouble, and I could find no relief anywhere. I spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines. Some would give temporary relief, and others none whatever. I decided to try Warner's Safe Cure as a last resort, and wish I had followed the advice of friends sooner. It was the only thing that helped me, and in less than four months it had made a new woman of me. I am entirely cured, and I give all the praise to Warner's Safe Cure. FRANCIS W. GRESHAM, Secretary and Treasurer, Higher League of Educational Society, Washington, D.C.

Kidney Disease.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is purely vegetable and contains no narcotic or harmful drug. It is free from sediment and pleasant to take. It does not constipate, it is a most valuable and effective tonic. It is a stimulant to digestion and weakens the torpid liver, putting the patient into the very best receptive state for the work of the restorer of the kidneys. Warner's Safe Pills taken with Warner's Safe Cure move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE.

The manufacturers so firmly believe that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely and permanently cure any diseased condition of the kidneys, liver, bladder or blood they will send postpaid, without any cost to you a large trial bottle, if you write Warner's Safe Cure Company, 41 Lombard St., Toronto, and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Kingston Whig. Write the medical department for advice, medical booklet, diagnosis and analysis, which will be sent you free of charge.

BROADBIRM'S LETTER.

The Chances Of Fortunes That Appear.

WILL BE A GREAT CRASH OF FAR-REACHING AND RUINOUS NATURE.

Four Thousand Millionaires in New York—They Live in Luxury While Thousands are Almost Starving.

(White Correspondence, Letter No. 1,204, New York, May 31.—If any man is dissatisfied with his condition in life he has only to look at the daily papers to see the chances of fortune before him. In this year of grace, 1902, there is no reason, if the papers are to be believed, why any man should be poor. There are thousands upon thousands of charitable persons who are dying to make you rich and surround you with all the comforts of life. Here is an organization for the manufacture of tin snails; there are 19,786,954 tin snails used in the United States every day and the profits arising from their manufacture are $4,504,063, enabling the company to declare a dividend of 70 per cent. on the preferred stock and 35 per cent. on the common stock, and in the noble generosity of their charitable hearts the owners of this wonderful fortune have placed the shares at fifty cents, thereby enabling the poorest person to become a stockholder in a trust that has never been equalled since creation's dawn. But why stop here? The alluring prospect of the magnificent Southern land improvement company is the owner of 100,000,000 acres of mineral lands in the state of Georgia; the main product is lead, largely impregnated with silver and gold. Here the chances of fortune are ninety-nine in favor of getting as rich as Croesus against one chance of loss, and here you can sit down for the rest of your natural life and never do a stroke of work.

While pondering on these chances and almost being inclined to invest, notwithstanding a good deal of hard luck, I felt inclined to bless my stars that I was born in a fortunate and charitable age. On the desk before me is one of our leading journals. On the front page are two columns of names to which a fortune is attached, and the publisher is anxious to find an owner to these names to make him a multi-millionaire or less. Almost twenty years have elapsed since a gentleman, undeniably English, entered my office, and with the blindest smile, inquired if so and so was my name. I answered him that it was, when he grasped my hand, and in the most delightful manner informed me that I was the unquestioned heir to one hundred and fifty thousand pounds, which had been lying in the Bank of England since 1772. My family tree had been examined thoroughly in all the other heirs were dead and the last one being killed in a railway accident in Australia. There was no question about the proofs. They were as clear as daylight. They had only to be filed in the chancery courts in London. The chances were absolutely nominal, the first being a payment of $25 for expenses and a few dollars and collateral charges. My visitor was a handsome man, magnificently developed, splendidly healthy complexion, his moustache and eyebrows were as black as ink and his hair was as white as the driven snow. I had had some little experience with charitable gentlemen of this kind, and my anxiety to make me rich, and my confidence had taught me to be rather cautious, so I told the gentleman I would take the matter under consideration and dismissed him for the present.

On my arrival home I found a handsomely bound book with a history of many families who had fortunes awaiting them abroad. A marked page was devoted to the history of my own family, leaving no doubt as to the validity of my prospective fortune and a request, in a handsome female hand, to forward $5 for the book. My library is quite an exhaustive one, and I returned the book to its owner, assuring the gentleman who had called on me that morning that my fortune was ample for my needs and that I would make him a present of one-half of the $150,000 spoken of, the other half to be devoted to any charitable purpose he might name. Several years passed by, when in an interview with chief of police Byrnes, he showed me a handsomely bound volume containing the likeness of noted criminals, and there I saw a magnificent photograph of the financial friend who had made me a millionaire. What was he then doing in Mr. Byrnes' celebrated criminal book? Our sight about seven years previous he attempted to rob a jeweler's store on Sixth avenue by smashing the window and grabbing a tray full of gold watches. He was caught, tried, convicted and sentenced to state prison for five years. He served his term and on regaining his freedom he opened a splendid office in the Stewart building, where he had several beautiful female clerks. The purpose was the same as his former venture, the giving of information of foreign fortunes. He was hunted out by Byrnes' detectives and disappeared from the city of New York.

The next that was heard of him he was occupying a magnificent suite of rooms on the Thames embankment. He thought that the sleuths of Scotland Yard had forgotten him, but he was mistaken and he knew the hotel in which he was living had been watched for several days, for he recognized the faces of some of his old Scotland Yard acquaintances. His conscience told him that he was watched for a murder which had occurred London many years before. The world was crumbling at his feet, escape was impossible, he stood before a magnificent mirror and blew his brains out. And that is the way I lost $150,000.

There is going to be a tremendous crash one of these days which in its effect will be more far reaching and ruinous than anything which has preceded it in the memory of man. J. Pierpont Morgan is one of the great central figures of the present hour. Never since time began has any man received such a reward for his services for a single year as that paid to J. Pierpont Morgan for the consolidation of the great steamship lines that control the travel of the world. The amount of his compensation is said to be $16,000,000 in the stock of the consolidated company. This giant octopus covers the earth. Place one foot on the equator and another on the northern pole. Every passenger steamer that passes beneath his mighty legs pays him tribute for the right of way. To the right about face, with one foot still on the equator and the other placed where men earth the secrets of the world; our modern Colossus is there the unquestioned master of sea and land.

The brain reels at the magnitude of these stupendous trusts which seem to be the work of a hundred millions of pounds than men within my memory thought of shillings. I have not so much concern how this gigantic change affects my fellowmen, it may not seem broad or generous, but the question is how it affects me. It reaches the food I eat, the clothes I wear, the roof that shelters me from the inclemency of the weather, and even the coal which the Almighty has stored in such abundance beneath the earth has doubtless in part been made by misgivings to the coming winter storms. What I have experienced is the experience of the world, and exhibits on the trial balance sheet of life's ledger, the profits and the loss. The millionaire exhibits the profit side of the balance sheet, and the poor hand carrier the loss; he staggers with his load of brick up five stories and thinks himself amply compensated at a dollar a quarter a day, which has to clothe, feed and shelter a hungry brood that is always found in the poor man's house; the difference between them is right here, the millionaire waxes fat on the blood of the poor man, who day by day grows weaker and leaner till death claims his hard-earned victim.

This sudden change is appalling and we are told there are no less than four thousand millionaires in the city of New York. Parties are given here night after night where the cost of the flowers alone would pay the ransom of a poor man's life. The rarest art is engaged in these entertainments, for when one or two hours of employment is worth a thousand dollars, and those who get these princely compensations are almost without an exception foreigners. The end of the season comes, the months are bargained and they sail away to enjoy themselves perchance by the lake of Como or Monte Carlo, where they have a brilliant opportunity of getting rid of the surplus of wealth that they accumulated in the grand republic of the west. When I look around me and am forced to a train of thought by no means comforting or inspiring, the question is forced upon me. What is the power of human wisdom to give to the world an equalization of its wealth which shall enable the poor man to have a picture on the wall, a brilliant piece of carpet on the floor, abundance of water with baths and other civilizing influences, and why not his telephone, a simple form of automobile, good food for the house and plenty of it, good clothes for the wife, children and himself, and if you can add a little music as one of the necessities of life you have done much towards making the poor man's home the most attractive place on earth to him; compensate his labor with just sufficient to keep life in those rugged times and sinners and you have what? Not a man, at a man should be, but a hungry savage looking with envious, longing eyes on a patisserie he never can enter, lying on a lawn at last, thankful to the great Creator and doubting if the dream hereafter has anything better for him. This is the condition which confronts us to-day. We have seen the spring-time and the sowing, what shall the harvest be? —BROADBIRM.

Damp-proof

Moist feet are cold in winter! Sole leather is cellular, and carries street fluid to the foot as the wick carries oil to a lamp. Two-thirds of street moisture, which reaches the foot, comes up through the outsole, in ordinary shoes. Between insole and outsole of the RESILIA shoe is placed the cushion centre-sole of live rubber, through which moisture cannot pass, making it wet-proof, as well as springy and ventilated. Its cross channels permit the air to dry the inner sides of both outsole and insole. It thus prevents the retention of moisture, cracking, hardening, mouldiness, and keeps the feet dry, clean, hardy and healthy. Observe beneath, the rubber centre-sole and its cross channels.
