FRICTION BETWEEN BODIES. quarrels between the public school board and the city council of Toronto. There has been one appeal to the courts, following a struggle of many months, and a decision in favour of the board. Again there is a difference of opinion, and again a resort to the law. The tactics of the board are apparently good. It asks for an in junction against the striking of the tax rate unless provision is made for $28,000 which the board of control omitted from the school estimates and this injunction must be argued and stands unless good reason se shown why it should not. The .. oard of control wanted the school board to discuss the budget with it in detail, and the school board declined. Whereupon the board of control lopped off $28,000 requiring them to wait upon the and explain their proceedings. Out of this meeting some arrangement come, but the possibility of an annual difficulty should be removed. school board should not be blocked in the performance of its work by anything the council may do, and if the law is not plain enough on that point now, it should be made plainer.

ENGLISH MILITARY REFORMS.

The report of the special commis sion on English military education comes out opportunely. Perhaps it has not been hastened so that its publication should not precede the close of

Its finding is not a surprise in vie of what has already been intimated in various criticisms of the army. Tommy Atkins is now, as he has been, the hardy man, who can be trained to do his work like a machine, who may have his off days but who is ever a brave and manly fellow. The officer who commands him is, according to the special report, first of all a society man, with little education and less of the spirit which makes for efficiency. The South African campaign has been an eye-opener in this respect, and its lessons can-

MEN OF DISTINCTION. Three remarkable men sat at the great dinner which the captains of dustry tendered to Prince Henry of Prussia, in New York, some ago, and it has remained for The Saturday Evening Post to refer to them The first is George Grey Ward, who an electrician in Alexandria Egypt, in 1865, and who, while men were dying all around him, during the cholera plague, held his station and kept the telegraph communication open between England and Egypt and the Indian empire. He came to America with the first cable that laid, and developed the cable service so that it made fortunes for himself

Seated beside Mr. Ward was another most remarkable man, Sprague, an electrician also, who 1887 undertook to apply power to the trolley car. He had an awful experience while he tried to enlist the capitalists in his schemes, but to his labour is due the wonderful development of the electric railway business The story of his first electric car, in Richmond, Pa., makes interesting reading. His invention has added approximately a thousand million dol lars of values of real estate in United States, and almost as much to the values of railway properties.

The third notable figure at the strike the rate. The school board Sherry dinner was Charles F. Brush, startles the mayor and aldermen by of Cleveland, Ohio, a farmer's son, who began his experiments when quite school board in the presence of a judge a boy and made an electrical work hop and museum of his father's barn. While a student at the Cleveland high chool he conceived the idea lighting the street gas lamps by electricity, and patented his plans. while on this subject his mind was directed to other experiments, as a result of which he perfected the arc electric lamp, and there's been mil-

They early gave evidence of their genius, and when they had something practical to offer the world appraised and accepted it. "Electricity," says the Saturday Evening Post, "is the main factor in the extraordinary industrial levelopment that has come upon America." But it' is something that is absorbing in its study, and no hat ever succeeded in its use has been azy. All the forces of nature are he command of man, but he must ndustrious in order to secure them.
