ABUSE OF SAN JONES. A contemporary refers to Rev. Sam. Jones, of Cartersville, Ga., in an unkind way. It notices that the evangelist is building a business block in his town and remarks: "Ancient nigger minstrel business in churches is a good money maker."

The reflection does not harm Mr. Jones. He can stand it. The man who acts according to the dictates of his conscience will be criticised, real hard, but he will not suffer very much in consequence.

Rev. Mr. Jones has had his mission in life. It is to preach to the common people in a way they can understand and appreciate. His vernacular was not very dignified, but it has been expressive and in it thousands of people have seen the points that, well-considered, meant much to them and their religious lives.

MR. BLAKE AND HIS VOTE. Hon. Mr. Blake voted for the conservative candidate in South Toronto, and the fact has been heralded to the world by the conservative leader and the conservative press.

THE AFFAIRS OF THE HOUR.

TELEGRAMS FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH.

Matters That Interest Everybody. Notes From All Over—Little of Everything Easily Read and Remembered.

Lindsay has a twenty-seven mill tax rate this year. Mussolino, the notorious brigand, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The late Henry Kuntz, a well-known Hamilton lawyer, left an estate estimated to be worth $170,000. The name of the late Horace Bowen, ex-chief cashier of the bank of England, had figured on 120,000 bank notes.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier sailed for England on Saturday. Sir Richard Cartwright, as senior cabinet minister, will be acting premier.

EDITORIAL NOTES. Will the Michigan lumbermen make a new attempt to buy up the legislature?

Men are going out of the teaching. Why? They cannot stay in it at the present salaries. The women, too, are finding more remunerative occupation in the other walks of life.

United Canada says the liberals spent $300,000 in the late elections. Did they? How does it know? How much did the conservatives spend? How much of the pot came from Michigan?

According to the Mail the Ross government has been going, going, since the election, but it is not gone yet. Mr. Whitney has been waiting for the crisis in Toronto, and he is getting very tired.

Montreal wants wide open doors in places where refreshments may be had on Sunday. Are they not wide enough open now? About four hundred offenders against the Sunday law have been reported in the last few weeks.

The British deficit last year was only twenty-four million pounds. It does not make the nation "stagger" though as much as the boodle which Kruger took with him made him "stagger" in his departure from South Africa.

The Toronto conference of the Methodist church has appointed a standing committee whose duty it is to bring about the equipment of the Methodist Sunday schools with trained certified teachers. It has a great contract on hand.

Duncan Bole, now in Toronto, returned from Jamaica, is interviewed by the conservative press. The election being over, the News, Toronto, is willing to announce that Bole's wanderings could not have been known to Mr. Ross.

Judge Dunne, of Chicago, thinks that because a clerk was paid only $15 a week he was justified in stealing from his employers. Can any acceptable reason be offered in defence of theft? Will any circumstance make an honest man fail?

The British government, according to the terms of peace in South Africa, must spend three million of dollars in giving the Boers the means of livelihood. That money should be spent only on the goods and manufactures of Britain and the colonies.

Owago discovers that the ice which has been cut for cooling purposes is being used domestically and contains, in an expert's opinion, dangerous organic matter. The subject has a local interest. Two kinds of ice are cut in Kingston. Only one kind should find its way into the house for domestic use.

What Is Wanted Yet. London Advertising. Kitchen's fame will never be complete until he has a cigar named after him.

Where Are They? A large proportion of the Boers will live in history and in South Africa. Those who resolved that the Boers should die in the last ditch are principally not living in South Africa.

SAYINGS AND COMMENTS.

By Captain J. D. Chartrand, Kingston.

Last night I saw my friend, the commercial traveller, comfortably seated in the lobby of the hotel, his feet resting on the window sill. He was smoking a perfumed Havana, with now and then a formidable jet of saliva, which he projected with a true aim and impeccable accuracy into a spittoon, as large as a tub, placed at six feet from him.

Unlike most of his comrades, who are generally shy and silent, my friend is talkative. He speaks well and much, has a quick wit, but he never listens. He avows candidly that listening is for him an intense pain and life is too short to submit to such a strain.

I took a seat near him, on the opposite side of his frequent trajectory to the cuspidor. And then my friend went on with this little speech: "You, Kingstonians, you are the most extraordinary people possible. You don't know what is good for you. You have the finest little city on earth, and you don't appreciate it. You seem dead, for military garrisons have killed you. Garrisonians bring in fads, fashions and social functions, but they kill commerce and industry. Look at Quebec. It was dead, but now since it has no more garrisons, it is coming to life again. It's now a flourishing town. You should do the same. Well, I counted to-day nine empty stores, in two blocks on your principal street. If you can't revive industry, turn your city into a summer resort. You have for that the finest situation in the world: immense waters and the most beautiful islands at hand. In front of your elegant city park, there is a spot, cumbered with weeds and rubbish, which are a shame for the surroundings. Tear that all down to the water shore, and build a luxurious, a gorgeous hotel with lawns, flowers, games, sports, orchestra dairs and evenings, dances, wharves, boats of all descriptions. Do things grand, and thousands of travellers will stop a few days with you, and you will enjoy their money and their society. But you must put your hands in your pockets. Wake up, my friends, wake up. It's a downright shame, to see every day in summer time boat loads of tourists going by your shores, giving you the cold shoulder. Yes, your city should be the finest summer resort of Canada, and you are the only ones who seem not to know it."

Then, after a last and supreme shot in the centre of the bull's-eye of the cuspidor, my friend rose and took leave of me.

It is with a rather timid pride that I publish here the very interesting utterances of my friend, the commercial traveller, who is alone responsible for the terseness and savour of his sayings.

IS LIKELY UNTRUE. As Brace in His Statement Said Nothing of It. On Tuesday we copied a paragraph from the Globe, that after the shooting of Corp. Knisley and Pte. Day, and the capture of their four comrades, "the Boers stripped the dead and living and nailed Knisley's D.S. to the wall and some African rickshaw to the hero's naked breast." Surgeon-Lieut. Col. Duff, who visited the hospital in Pretoria, where Brace was who read the burial service over the graves of Knisley and Day, and who says that the Boers knifed while he was reading the service, and who gave Lieut. Col. Duff a detailed statement of all that had happened to them, does not mention this piece of disgusting inhumanity. Is it all probable that is such a horrible thing had been done Brace would not have mentioned it? Recollect that he was making a statement that was to be reported to his commanding officer. Too many false statements of this kind, attributing acts of cruelty and barbarity against the Boers have been made; now that it is peace and that they are to be our fellow subjects, anything of this kind that appears so improbable ought to be discouraged.
