London, June 16.-The king slightly ill. Constant exposure wretched weather has resulted in attack of lumbago. His indisposition not serious, and there is apparently no foundation for the alarming rumors which were current in Windsor last night. His majesty had promised to attend a parade service of the royal horse artillery and the cavalry brigade at All Saints church, Aldershot, yesterday, but he was unable to be present. The king has unloubtedly been working very hard for weeks past and yesterday's rest may enable him not only to review troops at Aldershot to-day, as arranged, but also to fulfil his Ascot engagements this week and the tional ones the week following.

Later.-The king passed a good ight, and is much better. As it is raining he refrained from attending the grand review to-day, and prince of Wales took the salute in his stead. Last night laudanum was administered to ally the pain complica-

Seats to view the coronation procession are letting slowly. The mand so far has not come up to pectations, and it is tolerably tain, that unless there is a big rush for accommodation during the next few days, speculators who have erected stands will find that they have burnt their fingers. Between Charing Cross and the Temple a distance about three-quarters of mile stands are being built for twen thousand people. Altogether there will be seating capacity for a half million people in houses and on stands along the route of royal procession on that day after the abbey mony. Many Londoners are arranging to spend the coronation holidays on the continent.
