BULLER CAUSES STIR

REVIVES CONTROVERSY OVER THE NATAL CAMPAIGN.

Publishes His Messages, Advised The Abandonment of Lady-smith—Text of The Famous Heliogram to Gen. Buller.

London, July 8.—Just when the British public was becoming pre-occupied with more recent things, Gen. Buller's telegram regarding the abandonment of the Natal campaign has revived the controversy over his conduct of the Natal campaign. He has forwarded to the press copies of his despatches relating to his first attempt to relieve Ladysmith. His first despatch, dated December 15th, 1899, is from Chieveley camp, to the secretary of war. In it he says explicitly that he does not consider himself strong enough to relieve Ladysmith. He says: "I consider that I cannot attempt to relieve Ladysmith in a good position for the defense of South Natal and so let time help us."

The war office announced that Gen. Buller's telegram regarding the abandonment of Ladysmith was paraphrased for the protection of the cipher before it was printed.

Gen. Buller now issues his exact message from his own records as follows: "My view is that I ought to let Ladysmith go and occupy good positions for South Natal and let time help us. The best that I can suggest is that I should occupy defensive positions and fight it out in a country better suited to our tactics."

The foregoing message, the government replied that the surrender of Ladysmith would be regarded by the government as a national disaster of the greatest magnitude, and it urged Gen. Buller to make another attempt. The text of Gen. Buller's heliogram to Gen. White in Ladysmith, after his next failure to relieve the place, over which there was such a controversy in England, contains this passage: "I suggest your firing away as much ammunition as you can and asking the best terms you can. I can remain here if you have any alternative suggestion, but unaided I cannot break in. I find my infantry cannot fight more than ten miles from camp, and then only if water can be got. When ever happens to occur to you, your cipher, decipher and code books, and all deciphered messages."

Gen. White's reply was that he could not make his food last much longer, but he should not think of making terms until he was forced to do so. The newspapers take the view that Gen. Buller has now destroyed his own reputation and proved his own worst enemy. The Daily Mail says that Gen. Buller's attitude hitherto had many persons of weak judgment to imagine that he was really maligned, and that the full text of his message is worse than his own enemies supposed.

Good Reliable Raspberry.

And now the day of the raspberry has come. Many a rhapsody is written every summer about the glories of the strawberry, which is hailed by the enthusiast, emotional persons as the queen of fruits. To reject this claim to supremacy put forward by partisans of the strawberry, we admit that the strawberry seems first in quality only because it is first in order of time. It is the first fresh fruit of the season that comes to the table. After a long winter course of dieting on canned stuff, people hail the strawberry as the herald of change. They may think they love it for itself alone; but in reality they love it, because the letter brings to follow, the raspberry is better. It is more luscious, richer in flavor, more reliable. The strawberry is a coy creature, often deceptive—it may be pretty to look at, but will often prove so on more intimate acquaintance. The raspberry does not flaunt its own merits in outside show; but they are sterling, reliable and lasting. The raspberry does not come as a casual visitor, like its predecessor, but as a friend, to stay with us throughout the summer. All housewives know it to love it, and few of them would exchange it for the much-belauded strawberry. Let the raspberry have its due of honor in the succession of the season's fruits.

Religious Restraint.

Dr. Parker, who always has a few words ready to fit the occasion, stated yesterday that "one might call Kruger the most univailing old hypocrite on the face of the earth, but as a Christian minister he was bound not to use such language." It reminds one of the conversation between two Scots. "If it were us the Sawbath, Mac, I should be asking ye how much ye tak for that hay?" "And if it were us the Sawbath, Tammy, I should be saying two poun." "And if it were us the Sawbath, I should be ye can send it round to-morrow." They got that hay in.

Two men tried to force an entrance into an Ontario street residence last night; they succeeded in breaking open the door, but the arrival of the police who had been telephoned for, frightened away the intruders.
