Opifer per Orbem Dicor. GIVING AND ADVERTISING The Christian Alliance stands of

as an example of what can be accor plished by devotion. Its aim is deepen the spiritual life of those wh are not connected with it and to li up, religiously, the cast-down and glected ones in far-away mission fields The Alliance covers by its work all the republics of South America, Ja maica, Congo, Soudan, Northern and Southern China and India. Of the venty missionaries who are in the field twenty hailed from Canada.

Last year $185,000 was raised b the Alliance for missions. How? By a simple statement of its needs. Some times by an object lesson, by map illustration, of the magnitude of the work. At Toronto, on Sunday, appeal was made which touched generosity of the people, and they contributed $5,600.

The names of the givers are not known. They may have given out their abundance, or they may have given their all, but they gave freely, without personal canvass and solicitation, and they gave heartily.

There is something in the quiet sac rifice or liberal offering of the Alliance that is worthy of study. The men who are doing the most for the world are not the best advertised. They are actuated by motives which the publi may not appreciate nor understand

A MAN FOR THE PEOPLE. Mayor Howland seeks to minimize the service which Mr. Ames rendered the people of Toronto by settling the street railway strike. Mr. Ames, (says the mayor), and those who were associated with him from the board trade, merely acted as "a committee of the street railway company." It makes precious little difference to he people in what capacity men ac so long as they do able and effective work. The crisis in Toronto was very acute, and Mr. Ames led those who gave their time, day and night, the task of tiding it over. They succeeded, and, not withstanding Howland's sneers, they will be grate

The occasion of the seeming broach is apparent. Mr. Howland, six nonths in advance of the time, ooking for a third term as mayor Mr. Ames is mentioned as his success sor. Mr. Ames is not only a man education and of means, but he has the talent and the time to serve

One cannot forget, of course, that he essayed the task of representing them in a minor degree, that township reeve (for he lives outside the city in summer), and that failed. Since then he has, however, bulked out big in the public vision. In several ways he has proven his useful men in Toronto.

FORCING ANNEXATION.

The Review of Reviews has a remarkable article on the future of Filipinos. The editor says these people are in a peculiar position, a posi tion unlike that of any nation or race with which a conquering and recor structing force has had to do.

They are without a history, a lan guage, a literature, a political life organization. "At much expense ourselves," says the Review of views, speaking for the American per ple, "we are making a people of the and instructing them in the principle and art of government all along the line, from the local township up the general government of the archiree to be their own rulers. But first they must become a political entity. How long is this transforming pre cess to go on? The change aimed at cannot take place in a year, or many years. The Filipinos, if the have been correctly described, are as literate and unambitious people. To grow out of their present condition they must be educated and nurtured, not through one but several genera-

In the future-the long and distant uture-they may be esteemed capable of self-government, to the extent of defending political creeds and poli cies, and of enforcing them. Until then they are the wards of the American people, and must be cared for and protected. WAKE UP, FATHERS. Our city fathers should really have little style about them. Kingston is not a village, but a city, with some the ways and pretentions of greater corporation. Yet, there are eviof village life from day to

The visitor by boat takes a street car at the city buildings and sets out for a run around the belt line. He Toronto News. has not got far up the main street until he sees on either side of him crops of weeds, which crop appears to become the ranker the farther he goes, until, if his observation be at all concentrated, he is moved to ask if Kingston has a city council and a street department.

Weeds, weeds, on the principal streets! What a lesson they teach of carelessness, of indifference? Is there not a remedy? A couple of men armed with scythes and races, could down and remove the unsightly crop in a very short time, and the expense of it would be very light.

The city invites visitors. It pays to have them come here. The best that can be done for them is to make the call pleasant. If the aldermen, who are responsible for present conditions, heard the things that are said by the excursionists, sometimes, they would

In mitigation of their neglect it will the city runs itself !

ADDING TO THEIR MISERY. The French Academy of Medicine has done the world a favour by demonstrating that men are hurt in place of helped, physically, by the appetizers which they drink. They are labouring under the idea-a mere delusion-that they can cultivate the appetite, by liquors or compounds of liquors and

The appetite is something which not to be woed by the caprice of the individual. Nature, healthy, at its best, uninfluenced by any of the irritations to which it is subjected, will call for food according to its wants. The tissues of the body cry out for the materials which it needs as the waste of the body goes on in regular process from day to day.

Man, simple-minded, foolish, even idiotic, thinks he can tickle the petite as he can the taste with fanciful concoctions. Hence, in France, he has resorted to many things, and worse than all to absinthe, as a means of artificially stimulating the tissues and making their wants subject

The doctors say that all this is wrong. It was not necessary that the French physicians should declare this in order to make it true. The world knows that men and women, generally, are eating and drinking too much. They are loading the stomach with the most indigestible stuff, and they are washing it down with fluids which hinder digestion, and they wonder why they don't feel well.

If the children, in our schools, are taught more physiology they will come better men and women. If they learn how to have foods make flesh and bone and blood they will have more regard for the simplicity of life which is essential to happiness and none too apparent in these days.

Hesitation is terrible for you, for it gives away your own cards to your opponents, who are keen observers, or who are assoyed if you are too long in playing them. When you are the leader, study your cards in view of a possible go-over, if such or such trump is declared. Then couble or ask to play without hesitating. Hesitating is unfair, for it shows your partner your hand is almost good emough for a go-over. When you are dummy, spread your caros with order, each suit in its place. Avoid scattering the whole bunch over half the table. Do not interfere in any way in the playing, except by giving out the card ordered, there won't be any need for another or else by calling the attention of your partner if he renounces a suit or leads from the wrong hand. Dummy has nothing more to do. If you think your partner is making a bad play, don't show it, for it's against the rules, and, as he has enough trouble of his own, your interference will only make him lose track of his combination. Never bend right and left to see your opponents' cards. It's against etiquette, and as you are a human being, you will show, in spite of your-self, your satisfaction or your annoyance. When your partner calls a card play it properly. Don't fillet it off the table or into his face. Don't yawn or look askance or disdainful when the play is wrong, for you will discourage your partner. When you are the prone, be prepared to say his partner speaks, and this is for the for themselves to the bitter end of the Antoine Gobeil, deputy minister of hand.
