Not only has Canada coal, and coal to spare, but much of it is most conveniently placed for shipment to the United States. The Cape Breton mines, for example, can load almost directly from shaft to deepwater ships and there are others at the head of the Bay of Fundy which are only a few miles from the sea. In either case the journey to New York is only matter of three or four days for tramp steamers, and, with good luck, not much more for sailing vessels. To be sure, the Nova Scotian con! is not of superfine quality, but it is good enough for many purposes and would serve almost all at a pinch, especially with the experience in burning bad or low-grade coal of our own which the strike has forced many consumers to acquire-to the vast delight and profit of the speculators who had enormous quantities of it in store. waiting for just such an opportunity for unloading on the dear public at
