

A Little Coal Goes A Long Way

towards heating a house if fed into a Furnace made to heat one which does not send the fuel up the chimney in smoke.

'Sunshine' Furnaces

will extract more heat from a unit of coal than any other good Furnace.

Every square inch from the bottom of fire-pot to top of dome is a direct radiating surface.

The dome is made of heavy steel-plate, which makes it more effective heater than the cast-iron dome put in common Furnaces.

The 'Sunshine' has every improved feature and still is so simple that any person can operate it.

Paine's Celery Compound

Saves the Life of a Manitoba Lady.

It Completely Banishes the Agonizing Troubles That Were Dragging Her to the Grave.

There never was a remedy so highly recommended as Paine's Celery Compound. There never was a remedy in such universal demand. It is popular and prized in tens of thousands of homes, because it makes sick people well.

Paine's Celery Compound has saved thousands from nervous prostration and collapse; it has effected wonderful cures in kidney and liver complaints; its victories over rheumatism and neuralgia have commanded the attention and admiration of our best physicians. It has cured disease which everything else has failed. The following voluntary testimonial from a Manitoba lady who owes her life and present good health to Paine's Celery Compound, will cheer the soul of many despondent sufferers.

Mrs. Annie R. Cobb, of Strathmore, Man., says:

"Before using your valuable Paine's Celery Compound I was crippled with rheumatism that I had to crawl on hands and knees from one place to another. I also suffered from neuralgia and dreadful headaches, and could not get more than one or two hours sleep each night. I often thought it would be better to die than live and endure my terrible agony. I was happily advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and after the use of six bottles the rheumatism and neuralgia are banished, and I now eat, rest and sleep well. My present improved state of health is due entirely to the use of Paine's Celery Compound, which has done wonders for me. My husband is now using it for dyspepsia, and it is doing wonders for him."

NAMES THAT ARE QUEER

CULLED FROM THE KINGSTON CITY DIRECTORY.

Only One Papa In a City of 20,000 People—The Widows Number 769, Grass Widows Not Counted—Some Interesting Points.

If properly studied, few books will prove more interesting than a city directory. The man who has a vein of humor in him can find as much to amuse him as he could in the latest effort of Mark Twain. Here the child at your knee could be taught the names of nearly all the kinds of human virtues, the colors of the rainbow, species of animals and birds, the great men of all the ages, etc.

"What's in a name?" asked someone. A great many ideas and suggestions might be answered, which may point a moral or adorn a tale.

The new city directory for 1923 has just recently been issued, and a hasty perusal of its pages reveals some facts that, it is safe to say, are not dreamed of in most people's philosophy. For instance, few people have little or no idea of the number of widows in the city. Could you guess it? Wouldn't you be surprised to know that there are 769 of them? But that's what the directory says. So when we fulfill the divine commandment: "Be good to the widow," we have to be good to a big bunch of them. Of course the directory doesn't say how many of them are good-looking, how many of them are still young in years or how many have handsome bank accounts. Consequently, mean old bachelors cannot derive much comfort from the above intelligence.

At a recent evening every seat was taken. A stranger came in, but soon getting tired of standing, adopted a ruse to gain a seat. He shouted, "Smith is wanted outside." Immediately fifty men left their seats, and made for the door. As soon as he dropped into one of the vacant chairs, the stranger added: "It was John Smith who was wanted." Half the excited men then sat down. The Smiths are evidently a numerous family in the world over. This is due to the fact that Noah, when he got tired of naming the people, said to his private secretary: "Let all the rest be called Smith." They may expect to find many of their descendants in Kingston.

And they're here. The directory accounts for eighty-six Smiths, eight Smythes and four Smythes. To get an estimate of the number in the city multiply this by three, and you get 196. The Campbells are the next most numerous family, but a bad second with only forty-eight members. The Clarks are a close third, with forty-seven, while the Reids number forty-six. The Thompsons boast of forty-five, the Jones and Browns are forty-four, and the Whites are twenty-nine respectively. There is only, however, one "Nick" Timmerman.

The first name in the directory is that of Miss Alice Abbott, Division street, while the last cognomen is that possessed by Abe Zimin, who boards at 30 Princess street.

There are names as hard as Eliot, Stone or Nichol, or as soft as Cushion, Melton. There are names by Peck, and names by the Bushell. Some names are claimed by queer fish, such as Bass, Pike, Sole, etc. Even the Bate to catch them with is thrown in. No doubt there are many lobsters in the city, but the directory fails to mention them. There is only one Silver piece, but there are a number of Pence.

The directory pages would be interesting to the young student of natural history. Here he could find such words as Wolfe, Lyon, Hare, Bovine, Heare, Buck, Lamb, and even Bag. The naturalist would gaze with fondness upon such names as Bird, Raven, Partridge, Pidgeon, Swan and Crane.

There are within the city limits Lockheads, Woodheads, Weatherheads, Woodheads, Blockheads, and some heads.

Gray has said of each country hamlet that "some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest, some Cromwell, guilts of his country's blood." True of a certainty. What great names do we see shining forth from these pages? Milton, Robert Burns, Robert Bruce, Byron, Colin Campbell, Pitt and the "Duke" of Cambridge. Many more could be quoted, but these will suffice. There are Brooks, Lakes and Pooles, and near them grow the Ash, the Beach and the Birch. Beyond are the Meadows with the Hay, the Grass and the Ferns. A single Bovine grazes contentedly and, therefore, it is appropriate there should be a man who Myks.

In the city there are a great many of "B" batties—but he is no relation to the notorious Bill. Sykes, whom the pen of Dickens immortalized.

The sweetest name of all is neither heaven, home nor mother, but Sugarman. His front name is Simon, and he resides his sweets and other commodities.

The directory furnishes the titles of many Kings, but of only one Prince and one Earl. Strange that there should be only one Papa and but three Parents in the city. There are, of course, a large number of Kiddles, several Maidens, but nothing is said of adults. Even Kruger's name is included in the list. This is not Oom Paul, however, but a driver in the battery.

Winklin is made of oom Kinkball, but no reference is made to Kinkball, England, Ireland, Wales and Holland. Have each well-named representative here. It seems preposterous that a Kilder should be at large in Kingston. It is true, nevertheless.

According to the directory there is only one Gossamer in Kingston. The rest of us should see the publisher of the book for defamation of character or Cook him. Then we could expect that Dew would fall on his Grave to Morrow Knight, when the Moon and Stars are shining.

There are Goings and Comings, but according to census returns it would seem that there are more going than coming.

The directory man says there is but one Goodfellow in Kingston, and one Thorogood fellow.

There are two Spooners, but they are not the kind we see on the benches in the park. The city must not be regarded as inhospitable, because we are entertaining only one Guest. You are entitled to two Guests as to which street she resides on.

There are six very Meek people, one Wiley person, three Cowards, three men of considerable Merrit and four persons who are Harty. No mention is made of invalids or convalescents.

Despite the fact that there are twenty-two churches in the city, there is only one Parson and one Parish. There are, however, several Deacons, one Deacon and three Monks and a number of Deans.

One solitary Turk is mentioned, but as he has the Price no objection is taken to him.

John Gilpin is not the "trained-band captain" of famous London town, but a "citizen of credit and respect." He is wine clerk at the British-American hotel.

"Civilized man cannot live without cooks," says the poet, so it is only most that one should have Cooks.

We honest about our liberty, yet we have but four Free men in the city.

We have two Cannons, six Guns and two Sowards, but only one Coffin.

The Sparks from a Diamond dazzle the writer's eyes, and so he must bid a Shortt Farewell.

Deafness Cured By External Application.

The publication of 103 cases of deafness, and diseases of the ear, nose and throat, cured by the Drouet institute during January, February and March, and a further record of upwards of thirty-five cases cured during April and May, during May, arouses a strong interest in this method by which such remarkable results are obtained. For the benefit of those interested in this subject, a brief account of the method is extracted from the "Journal for the Deaf." The treatment is based upon the well-known absorbent properties of the skin, and consists of a specific which is used entirely in the form of an external application. A plastic preparation in the shape of a crescent is placed over the mastoid process, the arched portion of the skin behind the ear, where it is in close relation to the internal parts of the organ of hearing. This plastic application contains the medicinal agents which are injected to act upon the middle and inner ear. Absorption of these remedial agents takes place through the skin and intervening tissues, and in this way they progressively penetrate to the structures essential to hearing. Their curative properties are exerted against congestion and inflammation, resulting in fibrous deposits, and thus restoring the sense of hearing.

This external application, then, is the basis of the Drouet Method, but the thoroughness with which deafness and ear diseases are treated by this method may be judged by the fact that every detail of each case receives attention, adjacent treatment being prescribed where the ailment is complicated by an inflammation of the nose and throat, or by some special precautions are necessary by a discharge from the ear.

Those who are interested in the treatment of deafness, or of ear, nose, or throat ailments, will find a further description of the Drouet Method in the latest number of the "Journal for the Deaf." A free copy of this publication, together with a "Summary" containing a full report of the cases cured during the past month, can be obtained by addressing the secretary, 72, Regent's Park-road, N.W., London, England. "Journal" is accompanied by a "Patient's Report Form," which enables applicants to receive full particulars for applying the treatment at home. Any advice by correspondence is absolutely free, as are also the consultations by means of the report form.

Canada's Governor General.

The earl of Winto, is an Elliot, and like his forefathers has put a deal of strenuous work into the life and fifty years of his life. He has been a Guardsman; he has served in the Turkish army and in Afghanistan; he went to Egypt in 1852 as a volunteer. He has been secretary to Lord Roberts and military secretary to Lord Lansdowne, acting as chief of the staff during the Canadian rebellion of 1858, and he has contested Helicon. He is a baronet of a 17th creation, and has no reason to regret it. The third baronet was Elliot-Murray-Kynynmound by a marriage with the heiress of Kynynmound and Melgund. The fourth baronet got the barony of Winto out of Corsica in 1797, and the viscountcy and earldom out of Bengal in 1818. To these distinctions the fourth and present earl has added, so far, a well-earned G.C.M.G., and a son and heir for whom the late viscount stood sponsor. Melgund, which gives him a title, is a ruined castle in Forfarshire, built according to tradition, by cardinal Beaton. It appears to have been a superb edifice, with a magnificent banqueting hall.

QUEER PRIVILEGES.

The Snaps That Some Royal Personages Possess.

London, 11th Inst.

When the two countries, China and France, were engaged some years ago in delimiting the boundaries between the French colony of Tonquin and Chinese territory, the European commissioners were extremely surprised at the anxiety of the Celestials to keep in their possession a small range of low hills. They seemed to naturally fall within the French sphere, but the Chinese officials offered so good an exchange for them that they were permitted to keep them.

It was not until afterward that the reason was discovered. These hills are covered by the stones from the famous Siamese sapphire mines. Every leaf of the crop goes direct to Peking, and no inferior person is permitted under penalty of death to use so much as a couple of this perfect product.

Very peculiar are some of the privileges appertaining to Asiatic potentates. A special brand of tobacco is grown for the king of Siam. It is made into cigars a foot in length for the speech of his majesty, and six inches for the rest of the court.

Another of the privileges of this monarch is to be permitted a first section of the mines from the famous Siamese sapphire mines. By custom these are given free, but as a matter of fact he pays for all he takes.

In Persia it is the exclusive privilege of the shah to drive white horses with tails raised six inches from their tips. All through Turkey and other Mahomedan countries the horse's tail is a symbol of honor. A pasha of three tails is the highest in rank next to royalty.

In the left ear of Menelik, king of Abyssinia, may be seen a diamond solitaire earring set with gold. This has two meanings; that the wearer has killed an elephant and that he is a royal heir. In Abyssinia none except those who can claim blood relation with the monarch are permitted to wear gold in any shape or form.

This seems a more sensible privilege than that formerly accorded to the royal harem, which consisted of some twelve, the people of Madagascar are devoted to kite flying. Even the king or queen used frequently to share in this amusement; queen Ranavalona, the last sovereign, was very fond of it, and she is reported to have lost a subject's kite should be permitted to a greater height than that of their ruler, and this old privilege was most carefully guarded for centuries.

The privileges of European monarchs are comparatively unimportant now, and Spain, however, retains a few which are rather medieval. For one thing, no subject of noble birth may so much as touch the sacred person of the king.

Some years ago when the little king was running downstairs he slipped and fell, and would certainly have been badly hurt, perhaps killed, had not a young footman sprung to the rescue and caught the boy in his arms. For his services the monarch immediately received his discharge.

Fortunately for him the queen regent is not so narrow minded as her officials. She immediately sent for the man, thanked him, and made him a sufficient sum of money to keep him in comfort for the rest of his life.

When the czar and czarina last visited France their beds were spread with some magnificent linen accumulated by Napoleon III. Much to the chagrin of their retainers, the seraglio of their majesties stripped all these off and put in their place splendid sheets worked with the Russian imperial arms.

It appears that this is the invariable custom of the Russian royal family, who, wherever they travel, never use any bed linen or towels but their own.

Other privileges also, the czar of all the Russias enjoys. There are certain ponds in the imperial parks where no one but the reigning sovereign may throw a line. The present czar only occasionally handles a rod, but when he does so he is able to pull out by the dozen monster carp and pike, some of which are said to have been originally placed in the waters by Peter the great himself. To the czar it is alone permitted to drive at full gallop along the public roads, and this is a privilege which he frequently avails himself of.

As for England's royal family their privileges are not only few in number, but they very rarely avail themselves of them. For instance, although the king may claim free transportation over any railway in the kingdom, he never does so.

He could, if he so desired, have all the water and gas he requires supplied free to all the royal palaces. Yet he prefers to pay for these necessities of every day life. Even local rates and taxes, which rulers are especially exempted from, are not avoided. The collectors do not send demand notes to Buckingham palace or Windsor, but a certain lump sum is sent annually by the controller of the household to the representatives of the authorities of the boroughs in which the palaces are situated.

Only two of the British royal privileges are commonly put in practice. One is the settling of disputes, or judging of small offences, among the servants of the royal household by a private tribunal, the board of green cloth; the other, the right of not submitting the wills of monarchs to probate. No one outside of her heirs and one or two officials seems to be aware of the existence of the latter, the late queen Victoria was disposed of.

THE YEAR 1902.

An "Annus Mirabilis"; Disasters Cost 100,000 Lives.

Montreal Herald.

The year 1902 is likely to go down in history as an "annus mirabilis," by which term the year of special disaster have been known through the ages.

Although just about half finished, 1902 already has its record an appalling loss of life throughout the world.

No fewer than 100,000 human beings have fallen victims. Less than half of these deaths occurred at Martinique, through Pele's frightful eruption. The remainder, was occasioned by other catastrophes, the earth quakes in Guatemala, the floods in the United States and Canada.

Close students of history predict more terrible calamities to follow, basing their predictions chiefly on the common belief that "misfortunes never come singly."

In the calamities of the present year it is easy enough to imagine a conclusion, for all may be explained as due to the year forces of some sort. In another dreadful year, that of 1666, in England, there is no apparent reason why one disaster followed another. That was the year following the occurrence of the black plague, which had swept over London, completing its devastation by leaving 100,000 dead. Then came the great fire that ate out the central portion of London. Spain suffered from a great drought, and died up the springs and shrivelled the crops. At the same time fertile fields of Germany and the Rhine valley were laid waste by floods. Italy was shaken with earthquakes. There were signs in the heavens, and there were numerous bloody wars.

The year 1765 was made an "annus mirabilis" by the Lisbon earthquake, entailing a loss of life estimated variously at from 100,000 to 150,000.

One of the most terrible years of the east was that of A.D. 431. Constantinople was laid in ruins by an earthquake that was felt all over Asia Minor and the Aegean and Black seas. The empire was in the throes of Hunnish invasion, the Scythian cavalry were devastating the valleys of the Danube. The year 732 A.D. was likewise memorable for the most destructive earthquake since the world began. Syria and Palestine were the centre of disturbances, 500 cities and villages being shaken into ruins and 250,000 people killed.

And now comes the Johnstown, Pa., mine disaster, in which it is believed more than 200 lives have been lost.

A PROMINENT RAILROADER.

A Man Highly Esteemed By Press Workers.

Montreal Star.

There is no more genial or popular man amongst the younger generation of railway men of to-day than H. R. Charlton, head of the advertising department of the Grand Trunk railway system, and his additions to the rail road literature of the day are not surpassed by any of the other great systems of the continent. He has been especially successful in opening up a beautiful district of New Ontario and has already succeeded in attracting a large American and Canadian tourist travel thereto. Much of Mr. Charlton's success is probably due to his newspaper training. He knows how to handle men and he has learned how to serve the public. Born at St. John, Que., in 1866, he was educated at the high school there, and at the Montreal business college. From 1881 to 1884 he was on the staff of the St. John News, and from 1884 to 1886, served on the Waterloo and Magog railway survey. From 1887 to 1892, he did such good journalistic work on the Montreal Herald that it attracted the attention of the executive of the C.P.R., and in April, 1892, he was placed in charge of the advertising department of that system, where he remained until 1896. After serving in the same capacity for a large mercantile concern in the city, in January, 1898, he was appointed general advertising agent of the Grand Trunk system, a position which he has ever since filled with merited success.

Got An Explanation.

In the criminal court of an English city a barrister lawyer engaged a tartar in the person of a physician of considerable local repute. The lawyer represented the defence, and the doctor testified that he had treated the prosecutor for a black eye.

"What do you mean by a black eye?" queried the attorney.

"I mean," said the doctor, without a smile, "that the prosecutor had received a severe contusion over the lower portion of the frontal bone, producing extensive ecchymosis around the eye, together with considerable infiltration of the subjacent areolar tissue."

"Serve you right," said the judge to the shamed lawyer, "everybody knows what a black eye is."
