LIFE SAVING APPARATUS.

Intended For Saving Life At Sea -A Successful Trial

London, July 14 .- A despatch from Geneva to the Daily Mail says that experiments were made on Sunday on the lake of Geneva with a new apparatus for saving life at sea, invented by Prof. Probst, a native of Geneva. The apparatus consists of a diving suit of india rubber, opening in the centre. It can be rapidly donned; it is so buoyant that nearly half the body remains above water. Air tight pocuets on the side of the dress contain a lamp and matches, store of food and a trumpet. The experiments were

The newspapers, which are unanimous in paying tributes to lord Salisbury's personal character, are divided as to whether to expect new departures in policy to follow the resignation. Much depends on whether Mr. Balfour will go to the house of lords. If he accepts a peerage, it is certain that Mr. Chamberlain will become government leader in the house of commons, probably still retaining the colonial secretaryship. The Morning Post says that in the management of British external affairs lord Salisbury enjoyed to an un-

the office lord Salisbury has vacated. The Times says that Mr. Balfour enjoys the confidence, regard and almost the affection of his political opponents, while the loyalty of his own party is immense. Mr. Chamberlain has very high claims on the premiership; more than any other man he has stood for the government in the eyes of the world. But Mr. Chamberlain has never shown the smallest ambition to lead in the house of commons. He has never been a candidate for the premiership. The Times expects that Mr. Balfour will remain in the house of commons and that the duke of Devonshire will lead the house of lords.

The Daily Telegraph says that as London, July 14.—The following soon as lord Salisbury was assured communication was issued from Down- that his desire for rest could not reinterview with Mr. Chamberlain. Sir Eamund Barton is spending the week out of London, and Sir Richard Seddon was the only colonial premier who would express his views in any detail. The New Zealand statesman says that with Mr. Chamberlain at the colonial office, there would be no change in the policy of the government with regard to the colonies which has been for the good of the The king has asked lord Salisbury to accept some signal honor in return for his great services to the state and it is possible that he will be raised to the dignity of a dukedom. Queen Victoria, on at least two occasions, proposed to make him a duke, but his name has not appeared in any of the honor lists for a great many years. The retiring statesman has for weeks past been in failing health and it is believed that his physician urged upon him the necessity of withdrawing at once from the turmoil of political life, otherwise he would probably have delayed his resignation until after the coronation ceremony next month. It is assumed that in accordance with custom, the members of cabinet will formally place their resignations the hands of Mr. Balfour, so that he may be free to make any change if he should think it desirable or advis-
