THE FEAR OF DEATH. One of Three Causes That Shorten Life.

Bystander in Workly Sun. A French man of science tells us that one of three causes which short en life is fear of death, by which he supposes men in general to be haunted. Is he right as to the fact? What is the usual observation of physicians as to the general feeling of their pa tients on the approach of death? De tion, or at least to quiescence? "Revenge," says Bacon, "triumphs over death; love slights it; honor aspireth, grief flyeth, to it." "It is no less worthy," he adds, "to observe how little alteration in good spirits the approaches of death make; for they appear to be the same men until the last instant." What death is anvone who has taken chloroform knows; sleep perhaps consciousness is not so entirely lost. No one can think with leasure of being borne away from his home never to return, and parting orever, if it is to be forever, from Don't those whom he loves. Nor, supposing that the succession of generations is necessary to the progress of the race, has the individual man, when his consciousness has ceased, whatever may become of his dust, much interest in progress. Yet, on the whole, human ity has bowed to the inevitable patiently, if not without a sigh. It seems to be felt that what is universal cannot be an evil. Poetry plays with death, and we are not repelled. What dreams may come in that sleep of death is a question which must give us, as it gave Hamlet, pause. Hamle apparently had failed to solve it.

Brain Food Nonsense. Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspensia. You must prepare for their appearance or pre vent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy milions.
