The Troopers Contributed to a Fine Coronation Arch in Johannesburg-The Boys Found Garrison Duty Slow.

While in London, Kingston members of the coronation contingent had the pleasure of meeting veterinary-captain "Colt" Metcalfe, a member of the South African war contingent to the coronation, Capt. Metcalfe looked picture of health and was, to use his own phrase, "in clover." He was glad to meet the Kingston boys and sent home kind regards to friends. He intended returning to South Africa, having been appointed a veterinarycaptain in the imperial service, which rank will net him about $7.50 a day. He held the local rank of captain, which he was given upon landing South Africa the second time; this was only a colonial rank, which now has been made permanent by the imperial war office. As a colonial captain his pay was only about $5 a city. day. He sent home with the Kingston boys a sketch of himself which some English war artist had made of him.

How He Saved His Hay.

A farmer on the market Tuesday morning, stated that he had saved his hay from rot simply by using common sense and care. He cut a small amount at a time, and got it in the day, or at latest the next. There no necessity he claims, for a farmer to cut one or two whole fields at time, and leave it for the rain to destroy. He advises his brethren in capation to follow his method.
