One of these enterprising men volunteered the information that he has noticed that until they attain Marysville, Tyendinaga, July 23. - | weight of two or three pounds eels The incident reminds lumbermen here of an occurrence at a little lake to years ago. In order to supply a rapid to float a large number of logs the Ottawa river, it became necessary to cut through a rocky natural dam and allow a little sheet of water to discharge into it. The blasting powder did its work well and the log drivers accomplished heir object comfortably. On the next Sunday several of the men made their way back to see the result of their sudden drainage of the lake. They found about an acre of thick mud at the very centre of where the pond had been, and this was alive with a struggling, writhing mass of great eels.

The specimens they dragged to camp were so huge that the cook refused to have anything to do with them, as he did not believe eels ever grew to such a size. A few days afterward a number of men went to see the monsters, but found the mud quite dry and not a fish to be seen. Various theories were advanced to account for their disappearance, as hat a heavy thunderstorm had furnished water enough for them to leave for the almost dried-up brook. Another suggestion was that the wild heasts and birds of the eagle and hawk family had cleared away the stranded fish. The people of the country declared that the eels had gone overland to another lake not half a mile away, for "eels often come out of the water and crawl about the fields in wet weather."

SHOVING THE QUEER. Victimized by a Sharper and a Raised Bill.

Belleville Intelligencer. Some time during Monday a rather stylish-looking "gent" called at a grocery store situated at the west end of Deseronto and asked for some to bacco and a few other articles and presented in payment what to all appearances was a $10 bill. The proprietor was out at the time, and his wife, who sold the articles, appeared to be somewhat suspicious that the bill was not genuine, and asked the stranger if it was a good one. She was informed by him that it was a genuine bill and he received $9 and some cents in change. Shortly after the man left the proprietor came in and his wife immediately showed him the bill she had taken in. He, too. was suspicious that there was some thing wrong with it and went to the bank, where it was learned that it was a $1 bill which had been raised to ten. Not only had the figures been raised, but across the face of the bil the letters ten had been printed. The work had been most cleverly done. needing an expert to detect the fraud. An effort was made to locate the stranger, but he had vacated the town as soon as he had received his change. The police along the line have been notified to keep a sharp look-out for this stranger.

The stranger is described as a rather heavily-built man, about twenty grey suit and a soft black hat

A Sensible Conclusion.

Up at St. Thomas there is a complaint against too much home work in the schools. It is said that the teachers merely hear the pupils cite lessons, given the day before, and set new lessons for the next day. That is not as it should be. The real work of the teacher should be done in teaching. Home work is not a matter upon which any hard and fast line can reasonably be down; but it should not be regular or operous. If the child puts in five hours daily under the guidance of an intelligent teacher it should not be ne cessary to load it with home studies, There is something lacking in the teaching when such studies become regular and burdensome.
