The Canadians at Hart's River—Participated in Two Big Drives, When 800 Boers Were Captured—The Brilliant Record of the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles.

During the course of the campaign in South Africa, fragmentary reports were received of the operations of the 2nd Canadian mounted rifles.

The 2nd mounted rifles left Halifax on January 15th, 1902, and arrived at Durban on February 17th.

Here the Canadians joined Col. Cookson's column, and on the 23rd, they started on the big drive, known as the Klerksdorp drive.

Little Hart's River.

It was during this march that the column "stumbled" upon the Hart's River fight.

At 2 p.m. next day the column came in contact with the Boers.

Carruthers' Gallant Stand.

Capt. Bruce Carruthers was in command of a company of Canadians.

THREE LONE EPITAPHS.

IN FRONTENAC PARK, ONCE A CEMETERY.

To-day the Children Sport Above the Dust of Countless Dead—Thoughts Suggested by the Scene.

The innocent child who romps and plays on the cool, fresh grass in Frontenac park, the laborer who walks its paths as he returns home from his day of toil, the young couple who whisper soft words of love and tenderness as they sit on the benches beneath the branches of its trees—these think, but seldom—if, in fact, at all—that beneath their feet lie the ashes of hundreds of the city's dead.

So here, in a lesser degree, Naught but two or three crumbling monuments remain to tell of those who have played their little life upon the stage, and then laid down to rest.

Each in his narrow cell forever laid, The rude forefathers of the day sleep.

For them no more the blazing bonfire shall burn, Or haystacks with their smoking spires.

No children run to kiss their mothers' cheeks, Or climb the ladders to their windows.

To the imaginative person, who strolls through the park, these weather-beaten monuments awaken a train of thought which seeks to pierce the mystery of the past.

The silent, faithful witnesses to the fate of Shakespeare's contention that: "The evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones;" the epitaphs that men have engraved on the stones that mark their last resting place deal generously with their virtues, but sparingly with their vices.

Our respect for the dead is responsible for this. No man could pass through a truth-telling church-yard without feeling the full value of character.

In the north-west section of Frontenac park are three limestone monuments—the only ones that remain. The largest of these is a very creditable one, and bears the following inscription, which the ravages of Time, the destroyer of all things, has somewhat effaced.

Second stone tells the saddest tale of all. Pause and read it:

Third and last monument is a small, plain stone, but it tells the story of a great life lived and a good fight fought.

Fourth and last monument is a small, plain stone, but it tells the story of a great life lived and a good fight fought.

What could be more beautiful! Surely she, too, deserves to be remembered in their graves.

Years ago many of the remains were removed to either Cataract or St. Mary's cemeteries as a sanitary precaution. Hundreds of bodies, however, were taken away, the headstones alone were left, and the dead ground was levelled up, and the dead grass and the flowers, the birds come and sing in the branches of the trees, while happy, bright-eyed children, descending, maybe, of those who repose below, are sporting on the green.

All are at one now, risen and loved, Not known of the cliffs and the fields and the meads.

Not a breath of the time that has been hovers In the air now with a summer in its heart, But there are these avens of the seasons' warfare.

Of the flowers, or the leaves that laugh When at they that are free now of weeping, We shall sleep.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of a woman's preferences.

Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to save the money to purchase them.

If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious onslaught of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Roache's German Syrup.

It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages, and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get this reliable remedy at Wade's drug store.

Addresses By Kingstonsians.

The Miscellaneous Court of the Independent Order of Foresters will conduct a big picnic at that place on August 5th.

The members of the Kingston courts have received invitations to attend, and it is probable that a goodly number of the local brethren will grace the event with their presence.

Addresses will be delivered by representatives of the supreme court, Toronto, and of the high court, Kingston.

Steamers North King and Capitan leave Kingston, daily (except Monday), at 10:47 a.m., for 1,000 Islands, and at 5 p.m., for Rochester, N. Y., commencing 25th June.

JUST THINK.

You Can Think When The Food Makes Your Brain Work.

The mind does not work properly unless the right kind of food is furnished. A young man studying telegraphy said that his progress was very slow. It seemed impossible for him to pick up the art and understand it.

He suffered continually with stomach trouble and could not digest his food properly, and he finally got so he could do but little work and was tempted to give up his studies altogether.

About that time some one told him about the brain food Grape-Nuts and he went in for it. In a short time a very remarkable change took place. His stomach recovered and he became free from headaches. His hand, which was larger and trembled when he used the key, and the whole mystery of telegraphy untangled itself, as he says, "I had the mental power to master it, and the understanding came easy when the mind was in proper condition."

He is now holding a responsible position as an operator.

This is but one of the many illustrations of the advantage of using food properly manufactured for rebuilding the broken-down gray matter in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body. The facts are there and can be proven to anyone who makes the trial.

Don't overlook the recipe book in this package of Grape-Nuts.
