

THEY LEAD DOUBLE LIVES

KNOWN AS QUIET, PEACE-ABLE, POPULAR MEN.

Some Notable Examples—Isaac Morgan, Peace, Orricks, Mr. L., and the Gentleman Burglar of Glasgow, all Hypocrites.

London, July 31.—It is a curious fact, said a leading New Scotland Yard official recently, that many of the most daring and dangerous criminals have been known in private life not only as quiet, peaceable men, but as the most pleasant and popular of neighbors.

This, oddly enough, seems to be especially the case with men who go in for the more violent forms of crime, such as burglary. It is not many weeks since the Glasgow "gentleman burglar" was sentenced to six years' penal servitude. Although this man had spent twelve years of his life in convict prisons, he was one of the most delightful, hospitable and popular of fellows; he had his town and seaside houses, a sumptuously appointed yacht and his pair of grays; entertained his friends in a princely manner, and was voted by all who knew him the "best of good fellows."

He even had a reputation for piety and was a zealous churchgoer, although he would occasionally leave the church before service was over to ransack the house of one of his friends who had accompanied him there.

Some years ago there was no more amiable and respected man in Bristol, England, than Isaac Morgan. The children simply idolized him, and no wonder, for his house was always full of them. He spent a small fortune in entertaining his young friends, arranging picnics and "treats" for them, feasting them on sweets and juvenile delicacies of all kinds, and, of course, captivating the hearts of their parents. Anyone who knew him would have told you that "Isaac was a darling"—and yet Isaac was one of the most daring hotel thieves in the annals of crime; and, after a long career of infamy, was sentenced to eight years' penal servitude.

Peace, the well-remembered murderer and burglar, was a man of unimpeachable life and reputation in suburban society, the very type, in fact, of middle class respectability—a regular church attendant and quiet, peaceable neighbor who had no dissipation beyond his music and his pony and trap; and Orricks, the Dalston murderer of Constable Cole, was a zealous church worker, and, I believe, used to carry the plate for collections. Then there never was a more philanthropic man than Edwards, the cleverest forger and coiner of his day. His name figured in every subscription list, he was one of the sidesmen in his church, and rarely failed to put in an appearance at every service. He organized concerts, both sang and played excellently at them, and was a prime mover in several bazaars. But, poor man, his activities came to an abrupt termination when he was arrested on the point of leaving a temperance meeting at which he had taken the chair, and for a great many years his services have been lost to the church.

One of the most charming men the writer has ever known was Mr. L., who was quite the most popular resident in a northern suburb of London. He was a flourishing solicitor in large practice, and his geniality and amiability were such that it was impossible to know him without in a way loving him. And yet, as was afterward learned all the time he was practicing a series of the most heartless frauds on his clients, embezzling the last penny even of his wife and her sister, and to-day he is a fugitive from justice in some unknown part of the world.

But perhaps the most hardened and clever hypocrite of them all was a notorious burglar, who for years posed as a philanthropist in an eastern county town at a time when he was committing burglaries at the rate of a dozen a month.

WHEN BARLEY WAS KING.

Farmers Are Not Sorry Its Day is Done.

Toronto Globe. "A blessing in disguise," they call it now, but at the time the imposition of the American duty on barley, some twelve or fourteen years ago, was regarded by Hastings and Prince Edward farmers as the coming of ruin to them. For years everything had been done for barley, for which the soil, cooled by lake breezes, seemed specially adapted, and this was the greatest barley district in Canada. Thirty or forty acres were frequently sown on a 100-acre farm, yielding from 1,000 bushels which in some years sold at $1 and more per bushel.

"I can remember when a string of wagons a mile long waiting to be unloaded extended from a warehouse," declared an old farmer to-day. The same might occur to-day were all efforts concentrated on one crop and the outlets limited, as they were then. But it will not occur again. It is now admitted that the soil would have had to be laid up for repairs if the barley cropping had been continued much longer. The energy thus diverted has found an outlet in cheesemaking and hog-raising, and the two prosper well together. Every considerable village has its shipments of hogs of two and three car loads, mostly to Montreal, representing $2,000 or $3,000 weekly, while all sorts of grains are grown, the coarser stuff being the necessary feed for the hogs. How the counties have prospered under a change which sees scores of cheese factories and new railway stations, contemporary with the decay of old barley warehouses, is seen in the many new houses and barns, the excellent roads and the well-dressed farmers.

THE HOSPITAL TREATMENT

FAILED TO BENEFIT MRS. POTTER, OF WELLANDPORT.

But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Her, and She is Now Enjoying the Best of Health.

It is no uncommon occurrence for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to restore sufferers to health after doctors, and even the best of hospital treatment, have failed to benefit them. Among those who have been benefited in this way is Mrs. John Potter, a lady well known in Wellandport, Ont. Speaking about her illness to a reporter, Mrs. Potter said: "About three years ago I was greatly run down. My appetite was poor; I suffered from severe headaches and palpitation of the heart; I was very weak and had a constant feeling of weariness which no amount of sleep could overcome. At night I perspired freely and would wake up in the morning in a very enfeebled condition. To make matters worse my trouble became aggravated with those ailments so common to my sex. I was afflicted with ulcers, and so bad were they that although at different times I had treatment from five doctors they failed to cure me. I then went to the hospital in Hamilton, and although I received the best treatment that could be given me there, I was not benefited. I returned home very much discouraged, and it was then that I decided that I would try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got a supply and began taking them, and to my great gratification they soon began to help me, and under their continued use my appetite returned, the headaches and violent palpitation of the heart disappeared, my weight increased, and all the troubles that had made my life so miserable vanished. It will give me great pleasure if my experience will lead some other sufferer to try these pills, as I am sure they will be benefited."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are equally valuable to both men and women. They cure rheumatism, sciatica, kidney trouble, neuralgia, consumption, heart ailments, female weakness, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. There are many imitations of this great medicine and the purchaser should always see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail post paid at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Largest Tree in the World. Fresno, Cal., Aug. 2.—What undoubtedly is the largest known tree in the world has been discovered in the government reservation far up in the Sierras, in this county. Six feet from the ground it took a line 154 feet eight inches long to encircle the tree, making it over fifty-one feet in diameter.

Owing to the big bicycle meet in Ottawa on the Civic holiday, the bicycle authorities in Toronto have cancelled the fifteen-mile road race, which was to have taken place here on that date.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A Two Piece Gown With Princess Effect.

For slender women, gowns of voile, canvas, and foulard are made up with fullness at the hips and back, produced in various ways, whether by shirings, shirred tucks, or pleats of various kinds. We illustrate a frock with the fullness at the sides and back arranged in side pleats, forming a panel effect in front, and a box pleat at the back. The lower portion of each pleat is ornamented with an elaborate applique of white cloth, stitched with pale blue Goretelli silk, the material of the frock being biscuit colored canvas. Upon the upper part of each pleat is stitched a strap of taffetas of a peculiarly soft shade in biscuit colored sewing silk. True to the one piece idea, by which so many two piece gowns carry out the Princess style, the same trimming is carried up on the "bloused" basque only, the order here is reversed, the white cloth applique forming the yoke, and the stitched straps the lower portion of the blouse, as well as the basque. A great Louis XV knot of pale blue pannel is placed at the left side of the vest, which is overlaid with the white cloth applique.
