This day in the world's history: All troops drive Chinese from Iliwan, 1900; first Atlantic cable completed, 1858; Admiral Lord Howe died, 1799; Gen. P. H. Sheridan died, 1888.

Horse note—Grey horses live longest, roan horses nearly as long. Cream colored are deficient in staying power, especially in summer. Bays, on an average, are the best. Horses with black heads are stronger and tougher than others.

Fashion note—Pointed bodices are finished with closely fitted darts in the old manner, but cleverly draped in slightly boused style in front, and in close clinging fashion at the side above the straight-fronted corset. He hoped and expected to lay the foundations of a customs union and obtain the consent of the premiers to a scheme under which the greater colonies would make specific contributions to the cost of defending the empire. According to these reports, he has failed to persuade the premiers to support either project. They will have nothing to do with a customs union since it would mean a loss of revenue to the colonies they represent, which they could ill afford, and they will have nothing to do with any contribution to the military necessities of the empire that is fixed or compulsory. What else, they ask, could be expected? the colonists are peaceful traders who care nothing for these things, but Mr. Chamberlain would risk a war to win the colonies pay for home defence, which, in their judgment, is sufficient. What power, Germany or another, ask Mr. Chamberlain's critics, dare land troops in Canada or send a hostile fleet to Canadian waters to be faced with an American veto? The one power that could invade Canada is the United States against whom England would be powerless. Australia is differently placed; to her a naval force is necessary to prevent possible landings of hostile troops. For such a force she is willing to pay. In spite of these conclusions the radical press admits, however, that though Mr. Chamberlain's pet projects have been set aside, the conference has done good work in connection with many subsidiary, though important, questions.
