thousands of the inhabitants in the upper portion of the city were tremb-ling with fear, and they had hardly recovered from their fit when the wild storm of Sunday almost took the roofs from the houses. A hurry call was sent out to every police precinct from the Battery to the Bronx that a wild leopard had escaped from the zoo some time during the night and at that very moment might be mak-

BRITISH MATRONS

who love their homes seek to make them the brightest spots on earth. A snowwhite tablecloth laid with shining cups and saucers, and a bright clean home greets the bread-winner as he returns from his daily toil. A smiling welcome from a happy wife is his, and the children make music at his coming.

NEVER, NEVER, NEVER is disorder allowed to reign supreme. Alas, that every matron knows not that such a home may be hers. Some matrons are slaves of dirt, and their homes are homes of squalor. Some are slaves to worry and their homes are in a perpetual turmoil of cleansing through the use of common soaps.

SHALL BE SLAVES

is the music of that home where Sunlight Soap is used. Quietly, quickly, without worry, without confusion, the heaps of soiled clothes are purified with Sunlight Soap. The whole house is with one wash of Sunlight Soap made sweetly clean. There is no discomfort to anyone; there is time for rest; there is time for recreation; there is time to devote to other duties of the home. Slavery to dirt and to disorder, to work and to worry is abolished, and of such freedom and comfort the secret is Sunlight Soap. 'Sunlight Soap is used in the Royal laundries.

(Whig Correspondence, Letter No. 1,316.) New York, Aug. 8 .- On Sunday last, the third day of August, this city was visited by one of the fiercest electrical storms that it has ever experienced within the memory of living men. For half an hour the thunder rolled in a wild and continuous explosion and, the Blinding lightning mashed as if the order of nature was reversed and the heavens were on fire his appetite; it was enough for th instead of that other place, where everlasting punishment is meted out to sinners.
