MURDERED THE PILOT

After He Had Taken Murderer Over River. London, Ont., Aug. 18.-A strange story is current here regarding the flight of Marion Brown, who was hanged in London for the murder of Policeman Toohey in 1898. It will be remembered that after the murder Brown was traced to Lambton county where, after a sharp encounter, he gave the constables the slip and nothing more was heard of him until he was captured on the Pacific coast. Now comes the story that while in jail here Brown confessed that he was ferried across the river by an Indian and that just before the United States was reached he killed his conductor and threw his body into the river. An empty boat was found on the United States shore, just above the Indian reserve at Sarnia, after Brown's escape. A few days later a body which was supposed to be that of a boy belonging to the reserve was picked up down the river.
