LEGENDS THAT BELONG TO NEW YORK STATE.

The French Refugees in the North Country—Relics That Recall Attempts to Abduct Napoleon From St. Helena—Tales of the "Cup and Saucer" House.

Watertown, Aug. 16.—Not the least interesting part of the history of the Empire State are the annals of the region lying in the Black River Valley and along the St. Lawrence. Many episodes connected with its early settlement have a romantic and historic interest. Thus, scattered through Jefferson and the neighboring counties are the crumbling walls of old mansions which have a close association with the fortunes of the first Napoleon.

There are other relics of the same nature also. It is said that there is preserved among the descendants of the old French refugees in the town of Cape Vincent a sword which at one time was carried by Napoleon. Its whereabouts is a secret, perhaps because it is supposed to have been taken from the famous old "Cup and Saucer" house in the confusion attending its burning in 1864.

Mrs. Eliza Fraser, of the same town, possesses a number of relics which have special interest as they recall the story of attempts to rescue Napoleon from St. Helena. That story is one of the traditions of the region. It is not altogether complete, that is because the attempts failed and the conspirators therefore preserved silence concerning their plans.

The story of the arrival in this wilderness of the French refugees with their courtly manners and luxurious belongings, their trials and hardships in the new country and their ready adaptability and indomitable courage in making a new home for themselves is in itself a romance. But the Napoleonic episode by far surpasses it in interest.

A rain the night before the battle of Waterloo overthrew an empire; changed the map of Europe and transplanted to the shores of the St. Lawrence some of the most ardent supporters of the Napoleonic dynasty. The sudden lifting of a fog off the coast of the island of St. Helena a few years later shattered the hopes which the refugees had cherished in the new land. Their stay in this country was short, however, but it was brilliant, and to this day can be heard tales of the grand style of living which they introduced into the north country.

Count Le Ray de Chamont, who was a supporter of the cause of Napoleon, was instrumental in bringing some of his followers into the region when they fled from France after the Restoration. Among those who arrived between 1815 and 1818 were Count Francis Peter Real, once Prefect of Police in Paris under Napoleon; Gen. Rolland, his son-in-law, Camille Armand, Col. Jernaux, Prof. Pigeon, secretary to Count Real, and Capt. Louis Penquet, of the bodyguard of Napoleon.

These all settled at Cape Vincent, while at Evans Mills, near enough to be in constant touch with them, were Prince Murat and Joseph Bonaparte, the deposed king of Spain. Count Real purchased a plot of land and began the erection of the famous "Cup and Saucer" house. This stood on Real street, so named in his honor, and it had a wide lawn in front sloping down to meet the waters of the St. Lawrence.

Most historians who have written on the subject have derived an impression from the name and have averred that the house was octagonal in shape but according to Mrs. Fraser, who lived there for many years, the lower story was square. All the living apartments were on the ground floor and consisted of a large parlor, dining room, kitchen, pantry, two halls and six sleeping rooms.

The doors and windows were all of the French design of the period with oval tops. A wide porch, supported by massive pillars, extended across the front of river side of the house. The upper story, or so-called "cup," was much smaller than the lower one and contained only two rooms, which were used by the count and his secretary as laboratories. The count dabbled quite extensively in the sciences, particularly chemistry and astronomy.

This house was built for the reception of Napoleon Bonaparte. In it a room was set apart and prepared for him. Here were placed some of his personal belongings which had been brought over by members of his staff. Decorations and furnishings for beyond any previous attempt in the new country were lavished on this room.

The story has been handed down by those who heard it from the lips of some of the principal actors, then, that three attempts were made to abduct the emperor from St. Helena. An American sea-captain, who owned a swift schooner, assisted the party of Frenchmen.

The first two attempts to gain access to the island through the regular channels resulted in total failure. Every avenue was closely guarded by the British and every effort was met with a cunning equal to his own. Charged, but not disheartened, the rescuers were forced to leave without securing anything save a better knowledge of the situation, which they proceeded to make use of in their subsequent plans.

AGED COUPLE IN FIRST LOVE

ROMANCE CULMINATED IN ARTHABASKAVILLE.

Groom is Seventy-two, Bride is Seventy-six—Had Never Really Loved Before—Courtship of Three Years' Duration.

Arthabaskaville, Que., Aug. 21.—The culmination of a very unusual and yet interesting romance has occurred here. Three weeks ago Hypolite Boutin, of St. Roseville, a gentleman seventy-two years of age, who had never married, met for the first time Miss Adelaide Desharais, who, although she has had many offers of marriage, has found pleasure in remaining single until she had passed her seventy-sixth birthday.

When the aged couple met they loved, both say, for the first time in their long lives, and determined on marriage. Friends advised Miss Desharais not to marry, but her answer always was the same: "I have never loved before, I have often refused to marry, but now I love and am bound to marry."

The aged swain was repeatedly offered the same advice, and there was even talk among the relatives of the aged wooers to prevent the marriage, but Mr. Boutin was not to be discouraged; he met his friends with a determined answer: "I love her and will marry her, if they try to stop us we will elope, that is all, but marry her I will."

Although their acquaintance was of only three weeks' duration they were inseparable, and even more devoted to each other than any young couple could be. Miss Adelaide is rather stouted under the burden of her great age, in fact, she walks with difficulty, nevertheless she was more rosy and bright-hearted than are most young ladies on their wedding day morning.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO KISS.

Can Caress a Man When She Likes.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—No man should resist or resent the efforts of a pretty girl to kiss him, according to a decision just rendered by Judge Sider of this city.

Harry Alberts, who belongs to the swell set, has been bragging of his asbestos nature and the girls in the neighborhood of his home conspired to bring about a change.

Miss Mamie Mitchell, a young and pretty blonde, was detailed to wait near a corner where Alberts would pass on his way home. As he lifted his hat she threw her arms around his neck and planted a kiss on his cheek.

Alberts replied with a blow from his fist which discolored Miss Mitchell's pretty face. He was arrested, and in imposing a fine of twenty dollars against him Judge Sider said: "A woman has a right to kiss a man at all times. This is a privilege we owe to the opposite sex."
