Was Taken to Queen's Medical

College. The body of the late James Higginbotham, called "Dido" by the public, is safely deposited in Queen's medical college, where it was taken, the men of the R.C.F.A. claim, after a notice appeared in the Whig on Wednesday afternoon that steps would be taken to raise subscriptions to pay for the brave old soldier's burial, since no relative had claimed the body.

The Whig's notice was read by the men of "A" and "B" batteries, R.C. they sent several representatives to the undertaking establishment of J. Reid, with whom they made arrangements for the burial. But they found that the body had been removed to the medical college, and on enourry were told that it was there a short time before they arrived, but had since been taken away.

Then the batterymen visited those in authority at the college, and asked that the body be given up, offering to pay $10 charges in such cases, when relatives or bona fide friends claim a body, after it has been taken to dissecting place. Previous to this thev had gone to magistrate Duff, who willingly agreed to sign an order for the delivery of the body if the medical faculty were agreeable. But when the batterymen interviewed prominent members of the faculty they were told that | Scotchman Returns to the Locothe body had to remain where it was and that under no consideration would it be given over for burial.

Then the batterymen sought legal advice, and found that a body had to be claimed within twenty-four hours by either relatives or bona fide friends, who had the right to demand it up to fourteen days, even if it was in a melical college, on payment of $10 charges. Finding their efforts fruitless, the batterymen had to can cel the burial arrangements, which had been made, including the attendance of an Anglican minister. _It is claimed that when public opinion is in favor of giving a burial to motive Works.

On Thursday David Cammock, one of the Scotch machinists brought here by the Canadian Locomotive Works Co., and who was subsequently in duced by the strikers to go away, telephoned from Syracuse, N.Y., to Managing Director Bermingham, asking if he could have his old job back again. He was told "Yes," and his fare to Kingston paid by the company. Cammock arrived this morning, and was at once given his old position: He had a curious and interesting story to relate then seen to-day. "I had been drinking," he acknowledged, "or I would never have letthem persuade me to go away. The strikers guaranteed to get me a good job in Watertown, N.Y., at $2.50 a day, and they told me that living wouldn't cost me any more there. I was put on a steamer on Saturday afternoon, two weeks ago to-morrow, and one of the strikers accompanied me. He gave me $3.50. I went to Watertown, and placed myself in communication with the secretary of the machinists' union, to whom I gave a letter from the Kingston union. Before leaving here I was told to pretend that I had just come out from the old country, and not to let on that I knew anything about the Kingston strikers. # "Well, I hunted all over Watertown, but I couldn't get any work, so they sent me to Oswego. In Oswego I had a similar experience. I worked my way to Syracuse. When I went to the union members to whom I had a letter of introduction, I was told that there was plenty of work at Schened tady. I told them I had no money to take me there. They replied that I could walk or steal a ride on a freight train. I was out of money and out of work, and pretty nearly desperate. One of the strikers here promised to send me money if I got stuck, so I wrote to him, but if he answered I did not get the letter. I saw a letter that the secretary of the Kingston union wrote to the financial secretary in Watertown, asking him to keep me there by all means, and not to let me come back to Kingston.

"I was stranded in Syracuse, and so I telephoned Mr. Bermingham if I come back to Kingston. I telephoned Mr. Bermingham if ould get my old job back. He said Yes, and I'm awful glad to be back. I didn't know whether 'they would
