HAD AN IDEAL

And Held To It With Passionate Devotion.

IT IS NEW FORCE

AND IT WILL REVOLUTIONIZE THE WORLD.

A Criminal Who Says the Power He Discovered Has Landed Him Behind the Bars—He Relates His Story.

Milwaukee, Sept. 3.—Alfred S. Cunningham, whose counterfeit half-dollar pieces led the United States secret-service detectives a chase that extended over five years, told his story to-day for the first time, and a strange tale it was—a tale of passionate devotion to an idea that blotted everything else in the world from his mind and led to a life of a recluse and confederate.

"It is the truth," he said, "that I believed I had discovered a new power. I believe it yet. It is a power that will revolutionize the world. It will displace steam and electricity and other motive powers. It is a force of nature that has never been used. It was this that landed me here behind the bars. For this I have sacrificed everything—everything! But now it is gone—gone!"

The old man shut his eyes and pressed his lips together in mental agony. "It was in '92," he continued, in response to a question, "that I first began to work out the idea. It came to me gradually, and it absorbed all my energies. I was a machinist, and had lived in Illinois for a great many years. By nature I was an inventor.

"The more I thought about this wonderful new force the more convinced I became that it was a power that would startle the world some day. It was not perpetual motion. It is not a created power, but a force that exists and only needs to be applied. Just what it is has been my secret. I have not breathed it to a living soul, but I firmly believe that this power will run anything from a sewing machine to an engine.

"I was in poor health. I could not work at my trade, and I had no money. I feared to take my wonderful secret to capitalists before I had developed it, knowing well that the idea would be taken from me. Thus it was that I began the counterfeiting in a little room in the rear of a house at 55 Morgan street.

"My conscience rebelled at the thought, but my secret forced me on and on. I was an honest man, and I had no wish to do so. I could have made a fortune with my counterfeits. I might have manufactured any quantity of them I chose. There was no limit to the number I could have made. But the press and dies were so abhorrent to me, I used them simply as a means of pursuing my work on the motor.

"If I had been dishonest at heart do you suppose I would have lived as I did with the means that I had to make a fortune? Do you suppose I would have done my own washing and cooking all of those five years if I had been a criminal? Would I have abandoned all my old acquaintances and lived there alone, without a friend to confide in?"

WILL NOT ADMIT IT.

On the Same Terms as U.S. Products.

Perlin, Sept. 3.—The director-general of customs writes that, during the past winter, large quantities of wheat of Canadian origin mixed with wheat from the United States, have reached Hamburg by way of New York, and New York buyers left the Hamburg consignees in the dark in regard to the origin of the wheat. Therefore, in the future, all consignments of wheat, rye, barley, hay and peas from the American North Atlantic ports, as well as Philadelphia, including the Great Lakes, connecting with the St. Lawrence river, must, to pass the customs at Hamburg, be accompanied by a certificate that they did not come from Canada. Cargoes now in transit will come under these regulations. All the documents must be produced at Hamburg to prove that grain or hay is not Canadian.

PECULIARLY APPROPRIATE.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Tribune's London cable, referring to Lord Mount Stephen and Lord Strathcona's joint contribution to King Edward's Hospital fund, says it is regarded as peculiarly appropriate that at a time when the ties that bind the colonies to the old country are being drawn closer two Canadians should have come forward to further so effectively the scheme which King Edward has so much at heart.

Pawned Crown Jewels.

London, Sept. 3.—A despatch to the Daily Express, from Lisbon, says it is alleged that the government, owing to its need for money, has pawned the crown jewels, which are worth a fabulous amount. The real gems have been sold or pledged to the Bank of Portugal. It is reported that the bank is pressing the government for repayment of money lent.
