Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

Secretary Addressed Workmen—Some New Ideas.

At noon yesterday J. A. Lawrence, Y.M.C.A. secretary, addressed 200 men in the erecting shop of the Locomotive Works. The chief thing he had to tell the men was that a mechanical drawing class would be opened at the Y.M.C.A. on October 14th.

When thirty new books reached the Y.M.C.A. today it was a great surprise. The volumes are especially young men's books, including such splendid novels as "David Harum," "The giver is W. J. F. Mellagh, Brantford, a former association secretary here. His gift is greatly appreciated.

The latest thing among the senior members is a "Y.M.C.A. hoathouse." True, next summer is far off, but the fellows say that now is the time to begin plans.

The reception to be held on October 2nd will take place largely in the gymnasium. Special decorating work is in charge of C. E. Taylor, J. Mercer, H. Coyle and H. Wilder. Master Fred Carson has consented to help supply evergreen for the occasion.

In a few days the "Y.M.C.A. Red Book" will be issued fresh from the press of the Whig. It is a small volume setting forth the association's plans. The secretary will supply a copy to every enquirer for one.

The Ramblers Are Ready.

The ramblers met last evening in the Y.M.C.A. parlors and reorganized their football club for the season, with these officers: honorary president, J. McManis; honorary vice-presidents, Mayor Shaw, Dr. J. J. Hart; president, E. C. Dean; secretary, George Kidd; treasurer, H. McGill; manager, J. C. Hamer.

Made Many Fine Sketches.

C. E. Wrenshall, principal of the Kingston School of Art, has returned from St. Jerome, Que., where he spent three weeks with his son, manager of that branch of the Merchants' Bank. St. Jerome is picturesquely situated in the midst of the Laurentian mountains, and Mr. Wrenshall made good use of his time in making sketches of the beautiful scenery. Mr. Wrenshall was obliged to return home and prepare for the autumn opening of the art school.

Will Increase The Salary.

It is not the intention of Queen's trustees that the new principal's salary should remain at $1,000. As soon as the endowment is increased (and Dr. Barclay would be a strong man in that regard) the remuneration would be raised year by year.

PEARY'S RETURN

HE DESCRIBES HIS ARCTIC TRIP.

The Windward Arrives at North Sidney—All Well on Board—Open Lakes and Ice Floes Encountered.

North Sydney, C.B., Sept. 18.—As a result of the news wired to Herbert Bridgeman, secretary of Peary's Arctic Club, from the government station in Labrador, it was estimated that Peary's arrival here should take place some time last night, and as a result she was hourly expected. The Windward, however, did not appear on her return from the frozen north till nearly eight o'clock this morning, when she was sighted off Low Point light. By nine o'clock she was sailing up the harbor of Sidney; by ten she had dropped at the railway wharf. The wind was quickly boarded by the representative of the press on her way up the harbor.

Peary's manager, Mr. Bridgeman, had gone out into the water tug and learned from the explorer himself the first news of the latest trip in search of the apparently unattainable pole. When Peary stepped from the Windward to the wharf no one would have supposed that he had, unaccompanied by another white man, braved a winter in the realm of the everlasting snows of the midnight sun. His face was bronzed indeed, but he looked the picture of a man in the prime of life, slightly weather beaten, but apparently, at the next moment ready, if need be, to make another dash for the pole. He was delighted, of course, to hear of all the news of the civilized world, the coronation of King Edward of England, the close of the Boer war and the great strike among the coal miners in America.

The Windward is piled up with curiosities from the land of the Esquimaux, and there are a number of dogs on board, some of which have been employed by Peary in carrying burdens over the ice bound fields. The dogs are remarkable for their intelligence and are greatly attached to Peary, his wife and daughter.

The Windward left Sidney for Greenland on Sunday, July 13th, of this year. It was about this time last year that the Peary Arctic Club's relief steamer the Erik, with Bridgeman on board as commander, returned to North Sidney, bringing Mrs. Peary and daughter with news that the bold explorer himself had decided to pass last winter at Etah, North Greenland, that at the first approach of the Arctic spring he might be at the base of his further operations.

The discovery has now been in the Polar regions since he went north in the Windward in the early spring of 1900. Mr. Peary gave the following interview:

"Having left Erik Harbor, on the Ellesmere coast on August 29th, we reached Payer Harbor on Sept. 16th, crossing Ross Bay by sledge and boat about a week later. My Esquimaux guides began to fall sick, and by November 19th, six adults and one child were dead, and nearly all of others were ill, but fortunately out of danger. Early in January an Esquimaux came from Anaritok, bringing news of the fearful ravages of a fatal epidemic, which the tribe was suffering. Word was sent back for the remaining survivors to come to me and they began to arrive weekly. What medical assistance and help I could tender them was given.

On March 3rd my advance party and six sleds, in charge of Hansen, left for Conger. On the 7th, I started in sledge, leaving Peary in charge at Payer Harbor. Conger himself reached in twelve marches. Eight marches more took us to Cape Thule. The north end of the Greenland coast, an open access to the Greenland coast, as eye could reach. On April 1st I started again on my northern journey over the Polar Sea, accompanied only by Hansen, four Esquimaux and six sledges. This section of the trip was exceedingly dangerous. We encountered old ice floes covered deep with snow and intersected by very rugged ridges. This travelling was very similar to that experienced by the English expedition of 1876. After six days progress we next encountered open lakes and ice floes in rapid motion. As we advanced the floes became smaller, and the open leads far more frequent."

A MONTREAL SUICIDE.

Body Found By Boys—Removing Offices To Toronto.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 19.—E. A. Labrosse, a former employee of the sleeping car department of the C.P.R., put a bullet in his brain on Fletcher's field last night, some boys stumbling over the body later on. The office of assistant freight traffic manager of the C.P.R. will be transferred from this city to Toronto, as business men of that city and section wish to be in touch with a high freight official. W. B. Bulling, the present incumbent, will remove to Toronto about the middle of October.

A DISAPPOINTED WOODER.

Sued Widow With Family—And Lost The Case.

Goderich, Sept. 19.—A breach-of-promise suit, Coke vs. Smith, was tried at the assizes yesterday. The plaintiff, a man of forty, residing near Bensess, sued defendant, a woman of fifty-two, with a grown-up family, who reside at Guelph, for breach of promise of marriage and $2,500 damages. The defence, admitting the technical right to sue, had paid in one cent as compensation, but this was not sufficient for the disappointed suitor; hence the suit. The jury verdict gave the widow back her one cent and decided against plaintiff.

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Annie A. Baker, a widow, brought suit in the circuit court against the city, the members of the board of health and Harry M. The building will cost $30,000, and will contain accommodation for 40,000 volumes.

An Action And Seizure.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 19.—The Shawnegan Water and Power company has taken an action, and a seizure in re-liquidation of some $50,000 of its bonds in the hands of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The company borrowed $90,000 from Warren, Burnham & Co., of New York, for which they gave as security bonds of the company. Some $50,000 of that amount has been repaid and the company wished to get bonds to that amount returned, but the bank, as custodian of the bonds of the New York firm, refused to return them until the whole amount was paid. Hence the action and seizure.

HEARING OF PROTEST

In South Oxford—The Member's Evidence.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 19.—The examination of Donald Sutherland, M. P. in the South Oxford protest, was concluded here today. At the outset Mr. Sutherland said that when he accepted the nomination he did not bind himself to support the conservative party, if he thought it in the best interests of the party not to do so. His total expenses were $129, which included personal expenses to the amount of $25. He denied any knowledge of having certain unusually active workers in the riding, but said he presumed that the conservative party had some kind of organization in South Oxford. He canvassed but very little, he said, and spent but one month working in the polling divisions during the entire campaign. Mr. Sutherland denied doing any treating at hotels during the election contest.
