

HUNTING FROM TREE-TOP LOOKOUTS.

Hunting from the top of trees is necessary in some parts of the Adirondack Mountains, where hunters are placed at a disadvantage by the wonderful growth of forest, which interferes with the success of stalking deer. To remedy this some hunters in the vicinity of North Lake invented a lookout, which is one of the strangest and most interesting features of the hunter's paraphernalia in the whole region. At the top of a mountain they selected a tall pine tree and built from the ground to its top a winding stairway. In the construction of the ladder they employed a very large percentage of the limbs of the tree, which not only made convenient stepping-places, but added to the strength of the stairway far more than artificial cross-arms would. The lookout over North Lake is the most successful thing of its kind attempted in the Southern Adirondacks. It affords a commanding view of a pretty deer lake, and hunters of steady nerve have much success there. The top of the tree sways in the wind and is sometimes a ticklish thing to stand upon, but many women have made the exciting climb. For convenience of hunters a log cabin with a bark roof has been built at the foot of the ladder. Here the hunters remain through the night, to begin their vigil over the deer country early in the morning, when the denizens come down to feed and drink.

A STRANGE BANQUET.

Very shrewd in their business transactions are the people of Turin, and, as the following incident shows, the sense of humor is also strongly developed in them. In the local journals appeared an announcement that a large banquet would soon be given, at which the only guests would be those husbands in Turin who did not live happily with their wives. The banquet, in a word, is to be a sort of consolation feast and the utmost care will be taken that, while it is in progress, the unfortunate spouses shall not be interrupted by their wives.

The Way That Wins.

KING'S DAY OF FATE.

Tuesday has played an important part in the life of King Edward, as an English statistician clearly shows. The king was born on a Tuesday; he was baptized on a Tuesday; he married on Tuesday, March 10th, 1863; he was attacked with typhoid fever on Tuesday, November 21st, 1871; he ascended the throne on Tuesday, January 29th, 1901, and on Tuesday, June 21th, 1902, a difficult surgical operation was performed on him.

Remember Rules.

If poisoned, take mustard or salt, table spoon. In a cup of warm water and swallow right soon. For burns, try borax and a wet washcloth. If blistered, then oil and dry flannel will do. For children's convulsions warm baths are the rule. With castor oil doses, too, but keep the head cool. Give scrap of opium when cramp is in store. For fainting stretch patient right out on the floor. To seek in hot water is best for a sprain. Remember these rules, and 'twill save you much pain.

England has decided to employ chiropractors in the army. They are to rank not above, sergeant, and to perform the duties of enlisted men, but will receive extra pay of sixpence a day for six days in the week for cutting corns.

SOME PANAMA STORIES.

Stories of Panama hats are now occupying a good deal of space in foreign journals. Here are the latest: A very handsome hat of this kind was recently worn by a man in Paris, who said that he had inherited it from his grandfather, and that it had originally cost $1,500. His friends admired the hat greatly and were never more delighted than when the owner descended to walk on the Boulevard with them. Their admiration increased when he went to a gambling house one evening, and, having lost all his money, offered to stake his hat against $1,500. So famous had the hat become that his offer was at once accepted, and a minute or two later he won the $1,500 and kept his hat. All luck, however, soon came to him. One fine day a flower-peddler in the hat and split it, and accompanied by a number of sorrowing friends, he went to a dealer in straw hats, with the intention of having it repaired. The dealer examined it carefully, and then bluntly declared that it was a very poor imitation of a genuine Panama, and that it was not worth repairing. The owner seemed to be dumfounded when he heard this, and his friends teased him, and as a result, the luckless owner of the bogus Panama no longer excites admiration when he appears in public. A few days after this incident happened some young men were lunching at a fashionable restaurant in Paris, and as they finished their meal a plainly dressed man entered and took his seat at a side table. The young men glanced at him, and as he hung his hat on a hook they were at once struck with its extreme beauty. "That is the handsomest Panama I have ever seen," said one. The others, however, laughed at him. "It is a handsome hat," they said, "but it is a genuine Panama costs money, and that plainly dressed gentleman does not look like a Croesus." The first speaker insisted that he was right, and therefore, in order to settle the matter they called a waiter and asked him who the plainly dressed gentleman was. "You mean the gentleman with the Panama hat?" he replied. "Oh, he's a very respectable banker." "There are so many bankers in Paris," remarked one of the young men, "that we can scarcely regard this as a satisfactory proof that the hat is genuine. Still, if we know his name."

"Yes," said the waiter, "his name, I fancy, is known to all you gentlemen." "Who is he?" they asked. "Baron Rothschild," was the answer. Ireland's vice-chancellor, the Right Hon. Hodges Ever, Chatterton, aged eighty-five years, has just got married. He has held his office since 1867, and appears in a new wig every time it is reported around that he means to retire on the ground of old age. Jerusalem is now supplied with water from King Solomon's "Sailed Fountain," seven miles south of the city. The water is conveyed partly through modern iron pipes, but partly by the old aqueduct known as Solomon's Aqueduct. A striking collection of objects gathered by the Jessup North Pacific Expedition sent to North Eastern Asia, has just been received at the Museum of Natural History. Among the many curious and interesting objects brought back were a reindeer saddle and a cradle hollowed out of a birch log and covered with reindeer skin. The main feature, aside from their novel shapes, is the decorative work. They belong to the Samoyed hunting tribe. Though primitive and living in an almost barbarous state, the women are capable of doing exquisitely beautiful and original work. The designs, which are seen on their wearing apparel, cradles and reindeer saddles, the thread used being sinew, and the needle a sharp piece of bone. Reindeer herding and the pursuit of game are the sole occupations of this tribe. Transportation is mostly by reindeer. The saddle for the reindeer is shaped to fit a certain portion of the deer near the shoulder. The animal has a peculiar swaying motion, said to be greater than that of the camel. In place of stirrups a flat board is used to hold the rider in place. The inside is padded with moss and covered with layers of deer skin. The cradle, having the young child tied within in a sitting posture, is strapped to the side of the reindeer while on a journey.

THIS ELEPHANT IS NOT REAL

Here is a "freak" photograph. At first glance one would suppose that it was a picture of a young lady riding on a baby elephant. But it is not a real elephant. It is a silhouette cut out of boards intended for an advertisement, a carriage is thrown over the sign.

PAYING AND PAVING.

American Asphalt Journal. Every American city does a great deal of paving every year, and there is a great variety of arrangements for payment. In the District of Columbia the district pays half and the United States government half, and it is proposed to change the plan. Senator McMillin, of the committee on the affairs of the District of Columbia has been collecting information from leading cities on this point. The cities where the abutting property owners bear the whole expense of first paving are: Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Omaha, Pittsburgh and St. Paul. In Baltimore, Cleveland, Minneapolis, New Orleans and Omaha the city pays all or the greater part of the cost of paving street intersections. In Cincinnati the city pays two per cent. of the entire cost of paving, in addition to paying for the street intersections, the balance being assessed on abutting property. In Charleston the expenses of first paving are borne by the city. In St. Louis one-fourth of the cost is charged against the abutting property per foot, and the remaining three-fourths against the city in the district defined by city ordinance in each particular case.

A TERRIBLE DEATH. Inspector Baked to Death in a Plant Furnace. Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 20.—While making an inspection William Jeffries, in charge of gas ovens of a Charlotte blast furnace, met a terrible death. While working on top of one of the ovens, Jeffries lost his balance and fell in. The superheated gas baked his flesh to the bone and the skin was browned like crust of bread. Death was instantaneous.

DOG ON HER MONUMENT.

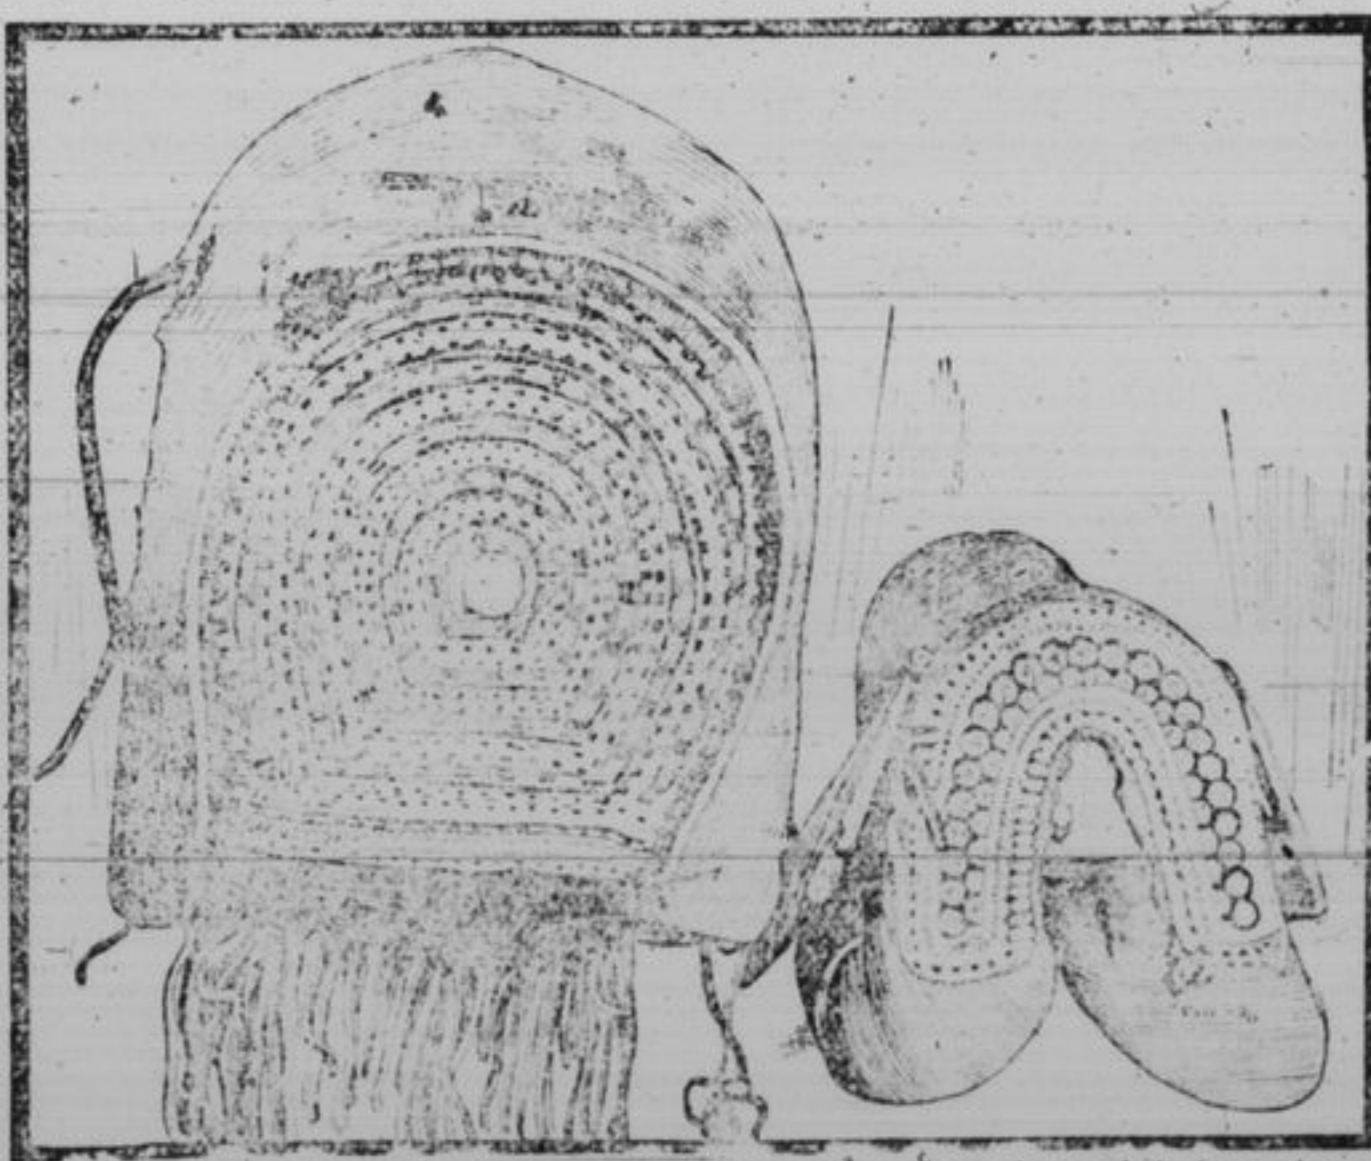

Curious and strange is a monument which was recently erected in the principal cemetery at Milan, near the grave of a lady named Leonilda Monti. During her life she was a great lover of animals, and the dog sculptured beside the tall tombstone is designed to perpetuate this fact. The monument is the work of a well known artist, and is attracting much attention.

THE CASE OF CRABS.

A new illustration of the accuracy of the ancient Arabic proverb, that when one door shuts another door opens, is being furnished in the case of crabs. Two familiar sources of supply of New York's constantly increasing demand for crabs, hard-shell and soft-shell, are Long Island and the Chesapeake. From the former, with ever discouraging detail of besetting terrors, comes a gloomy story. The crustaceans are very scarce. Anchor frost, which freezes the bay and creek bottom, is given by haymen as the cause of the destruction of thousands of crabs last winter. But the Chesapeake Bay men report that crabs are now more plentiful in the waters around Crisfield on the southern shore than they have ever been before. Such a run of crabs has never been known in Maryland. A large quantity of small crabs began to appear about the first of July and since that time they have become so plentiful that the dealers have all their boats full and cannot handle the catch. The packing houses are running night and day. Chesapeake crabs are now so plentiful that they are selling for six cents per dozen and the market is overstocked.
