WANT TO BUY IN CANADA.

Inquiries in England and France For Canadian Goods.

As illustrating the keen interest which is springing up in Great Britain in trade with Canada, the following inquiries are quoted from the issue of September 16th, of Sells' Commercial Intelligence, London, Eng.:

A Middlesborough firm would communicate with Canadian exporters of peas, beans, cheese, and other produce.

A Johannesburg firm desires to secure agencies for Canadian natural and manufactured products.

A London firm desires to communicate with owners of iron sand deposits in Ontario and Quebec.

A firm at Boulogne, France, wishes to correspond with reliable Canadian shippers of apples.

A London firm of buyers for South Africa desires to communicate with Canadian shippers of hams, bacon, cheese, fruits, and canned goods.

A north of England firm using quantities of spade and shovel handles wishes to be placed in touch with Canadian exporters of these goods.

A manufacturers' agent in Johannesburg will accept agencies for woollen, tweed, worsted, and serge manufacturers.

A merchant in Hull, Eng., would communicate direct with exporters of Canadian poultry.

An old-established English house wants an agency in Canadian wool pulp.

Enquirer with practical experience in furniture is desirous of representing a first-class Canadian manufacturing house in England.

A gentleman at Port Elizabeth would take agencies for building material.

An inquirer wants names of Canadian shippers of caviare.

Snakes in the United States.

Chicago News.

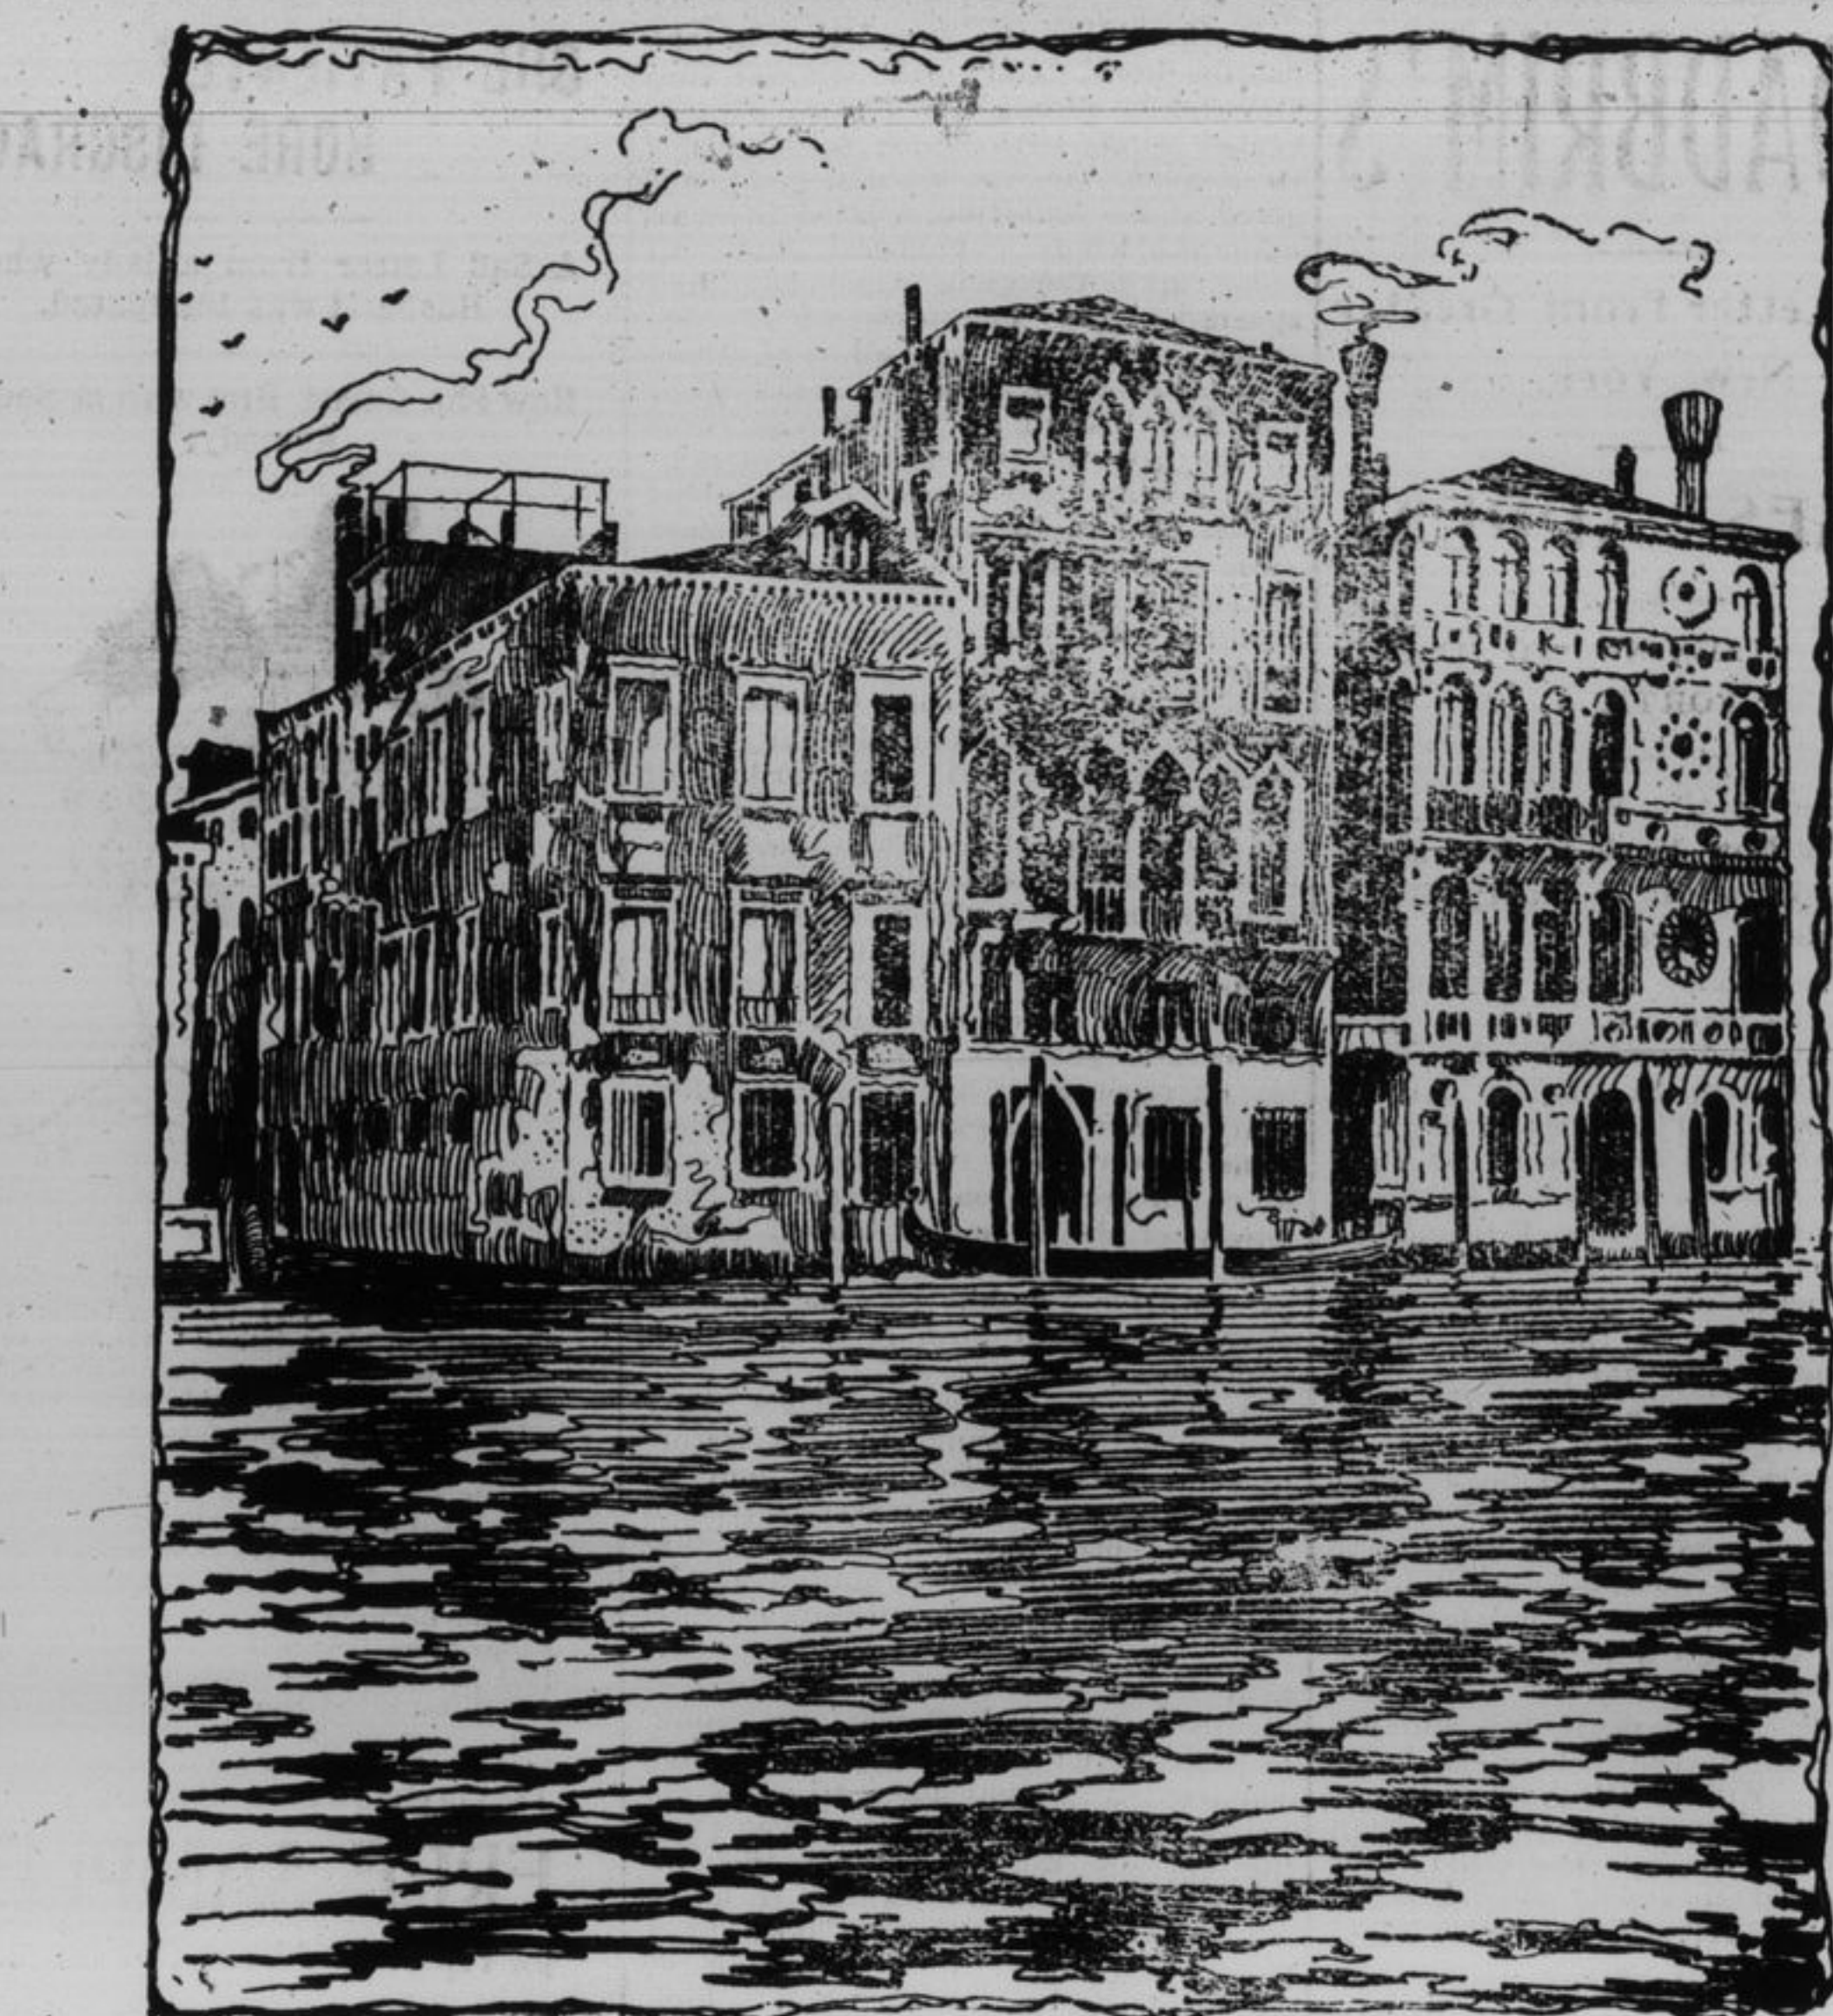

There are four kinds of venomous serpents in the United States—the rattlesnake proper, the copperhead and the moccasin, the coral snake and the ground rattlesnake. The diamond rattlesnake and the copperhead are the most deadly. The former is undoubtedly the cause of more deaths from snake poisoning than any other in the United States. This is due to its large size—it grows not infrequently to seven feet in length and three inches in diameter—and to the great length of its fangs and the copious amount of venom it injects into wounds. Probably not more than fifty persons die of snake bite in the United States in any year. Perhaps thirty thousand would be a fair estimate of the world's annual death rate from the bite of venomous snakes, notwithstanding the long and practically fruitless efforts of science to discover an antidote.

ACTRESS DUSE'S VENETIAN PALACE.

home life is her own. It is not the "home" of hotels that Signora Duse is happy in, but rather in the home life of her ancient palace, on the Grand Canal of Venice. Her palace, which is the centre building of the three buildings shown in the picture, is one of those quaint old structures which have made Venice an architectural delight.

It is not as pretentious as some of its neighbors, but, nevertheless, through its great age, and its architectural beauties it is one of the show places of Venice. When it was built no one seems to know. Certain it is that it goes back a century or more, and that it was occupied by one of the noble families of Venice is established.

Here, surrounded by all the comforts of practical age, Signora Duse spends the happiest months of her life. A quiet life it is, apart from the glare of the footlights and the tinsel of the stage. She entertains, but on a modest scale. Privileged, indeed, are the few who have access to her delightful home.

Leeds, England, possesses a factory chimney modelled on the beautiful campanile designed by Giotto at Florence.

A HIEROGLYPHIC STAIRWAY.

Noteworthy among the surprising discoveries made by the Peabody Museum recent expedition in Central America was that of a magnificent hieroglyphic stairway at Copan, unearthed by George R. Gordon.

From its design and workmanship the stairway is considered the greatest architectural feature that has yet been brought to light in this celebrated prehistoric city. This new find has revealed two important facts. The antiquity of Copan is pushed back to a greater period than was supposed, as the stairway bears an inscription over 700 years earlier than any existing monument.

Also the inscription with which the stairway was decorated in the hieroglyphic one that has been met with among the Maya ruins. Fragments of sculpture mingling with the ruins show that the stairway belonged to a temple undoubtedly the most imposing building in Copan or in all ancient America.

The stairway extended from a piazzette to the top of the mound, a distance of 125 feet, and was 26 feet wide. Every foot of it was covered with elaborate sculptures and hieroglyphic inscriptions. These are deciphered, and it is thought, will yield valuable new information in regard to this prehistoric city and people.

"FACE" IN READING.

Some Things Read By Words, Some By Pages.

Atlantic Monthly.

The good reader takes all reading to be his province. Newspapers, periodicals, books old and new—all present themselves to him in their proper perspective, they are all grafted to his mill, but they do not go into the same hopper or require the same process. On the contrary, one of the main distinctions of the clever reader is that without varying as to intensity, he varies almost indefinitely as to pace. This power of reading flexibly comes mainly, of course, with practice. For those who have lacked an early experience of books the manipulation of them is never likely to become the perfect and instinctive process of adjustment which it should be. A certain increase of facility, however, the belated reader may surely expect to gain from some sort of observance of this simple principle of adjustment.

This anxious but unskilled reader is too likely to have a set gait, so many words to the minute, or lines to the hour. An essay, an editorial, a chapter in a novel or in the Bible, a scientific article, a short story, if they contain the same number of words, take up just the same amount of this misguided person's time. No wonder reading becomes an incubus to him, with the appalling monotony of its procession of printed words fill endlessly before him. He really has time enough, if he knew how to make use of it. "Eben Holden" keeps him busy for a week or more; it should be read in a few hours. He plods methodically through Sir Walter and finds him slow; the happy reader who can get Quentin and his Isabelle satisfactorily married in six hours does not. The trained reader re-adjusts his focus for each objective. Milton may be read in words or lines, Macaulay in sentences, Thackeray in paragraphs, Conan Doyle in pages. The eye, that is, readily gains the power of taking in words in groups instead of separately. How large a group the glance can manage varies with the seriousness of the subject.

WOMEN FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Scheme to Encourage Female Emigration—Assisted Passages.

Johannesburg, Sept. 26.—The Women's Immigration department, established by the government, has issued a scheme for encouraging the emigration of women to South Africa. The department is working in conjunction with the London Expansion committee, which will select emigrants who must be British subjects.

The department will only assist domestic servants and women whose employers undertake to supply them with board and lodging. Each emigrant will be brought to the Transvaal at a total cost of £12, the government paying the balance of the passage money, railway fare and hotel accommodation at Cape Town and Johannesburg, where she will be cared for free of charge until a situation is found for her.

The Desk Slave's Song.

Los Angeles Herald.

O this is the song of the man who's chained All day to a roll top desk; Who, sweating over a type machine, Assumeth a shape grotesque, The breeze and the sunshine are not for him, The sky is a mere horizon, He sits and he grinds 'mid the rustling sheets Through all of the dull, dull day.

He thinks of the years when his hands were hard, His arms like the best of steel; He thinks of the days when his little limbs made Good time on a racing wheel; He thinks of the day when he held his own In harvesting hay or grain; Then smiles at the thought that a cropnet game Can give him a next day pain.

He sighs to remember the mighty brawn He showed on the college track; He thinks of the days when he played baseball, And wishes those days were back; He thinks of himself in a football suit Well padded and picturesque, Then weeps over recalling the baby form That's chained to the roll-top desk.

O man in the field, with the hoe or plough, Years not for the "easy, white-handed job" Instead of your sturdy trade, They're money—sometimes—in the office grind— There's life in the work you do! You are fanned and warmed by the breeze and sun, And arched with a roof of blue.

Your food is the food of a hungry man, You sleep like the dead at night; Your muscles are firm and your heart is good, Your cause is the cause of right; We slaves of the desk would renounce our hope Of wealth or a "raise" in pay If we could but feel as we used to feel Back there in our "bucky" day.

One Youngster's Stock of Names.

Paducah News-Democrat.

The person with the longest name of any individual, big or little, in the western hemisphere, is blacking boots on Paducah's streets. This youngster, with the wealth of title will answer to the name of Arthur or Hugh, but if one proposes to give him all—that is due, one must address the young gentleman as "Arthur Hugh Thomas De Witt Talmage Hardin Ireland Marion Edward Lane Branch Sam James Pique Reuben Walker Childs."

Young Arthur Hugh, etc., Childs is the sixteen-year old son of the Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Childs. Often by way of a joke young Childs says to a prospective patron:

"I'll tell you what I'll do, mister. I'll tell you my name, and if you can repeat it, I'll black your shoes free. If you fail, you pay."

If the man agrees the boy rattles off the whole seventeen as fast as his tongue can form the words. He has never yet failed to get the money.

Canker.

There is a mistaken idea as to the cause of cankers in the mouth and throat. Sufferers imagine that they arise from stomach troubles, but it is nothing more or less than the result of impure blood. Numerous so-called remedies have been floated on the market, but experience has proven that there is only one cure, "Iron Tonic Pills, 25c. a box, at Wade's drug store."

CLOAK AND TENT COMBINED.

Latest of inventions for military purposes is a wonderful shelter, tent and poncho cloak. When campaigning, it should be explained, a soldier carries as part of his equipment a half tent, a poncho and a blanket. The tent, of heavy cotton cloth, is useless except as a tent and the combined weight of the articles mentioned is a serious burden.

Another serious difficulty frequently encountered with campaigning in the tropics, even in the rainy season, is that of obtaining a pure water supply. Rain may fall in torrents, yet the soldier be compelled to obtain his water supply from filthy puddles and stagnant pools, where it is polluted by decaying vegetable and animal matter.

The combined half tent and poncho, made of a waterproof fabric, called "rubberized wool," will not only serve with another like it, provided by a second soldier, to build a shelter, but is converted into a cloak by thrusting one's head through the middle of it. Incidentally, it has, near the lower edge, a water pocket, into which rain falling upon the tent is drained, to be preserved for future use.

PLOUGH LAYS CABLE AS IT DIGS.

France has a new cable-laying plow, the first of its kind in the world, which has just been invented and adopted by the French government. This ingenious and labor-saving device will, it is claimed, revolutionize the process of laying underground cables.

The first project in hand includes the laying of a trans-African cable, which will put France into direct communication with Madagascar. By the ordinary method of cable laying the cost of this line was originally estimated at $1,200,000, but it is believed that this will be reduced to $1,500,000 by the use of the new form of plow, which has been constructed by M. A. Bagnat.

The plow is a very large and heavy implement, running on two wheels, with a beam sliding in vertical guides and operated automatically by one man, who is seated in the rear. The share is formed of a couple of rhomboidal steel plates, with a cutting edge. In front are two other blades, which loosen the soil and facilitate its progress.

Behind is a drum, around which is wound the cable, which passes between four rollers in pairs, arranged crossways, and then down through the share, through an aperture at the bottom. The depth at which the cable is to be laid, is thirty-two inches. The plow will be worked by a traction engine with winding gear.

Your Mission.

If you cannot on the ocean, Sail among the swiftest fleet, Loosening on the highest billows, Launching at the stormy you desert, You can stand among the sailors, Anchored yet within the bay, You can lend a hand to help them, As they launch their boats away.

If you are too weak to journey, Up the mountain steep and high, You can stand within the valley, While the multitudes go by, You can chant in happy measure, As they slowly pass along, Though they may forget the singer, They will not forget the song.

If you have not gold and silver, Ever ready to command, If you cannot toward the needy, Reach an ever open hand, You can visit the afflicted, O'er the erring you can weep, You can be a true disciple, Sitting at the Saviour's feet.

If you cannot in the harvest, Carry up the richest sheave, Many a grain both ripe and golden, Will careless reapers leave, Go and glean among the briers, Growing rank against the wall, For it may be that their shadows Hide the harvest wheat of all.

If you cannot in the conflict, Prove yourself a soldier true, If where fire and smoke are thickest, There's no work for you to do, When the battlefield is silent, You can go with careful tread, You can bear away the wounded, You can cover up the dead.

Do not, then, stand idly waiting, For some great work to do, Fortune is a lazy goddess, She will never come to you, Go and toil in any vocation, Do not fear to do or dare, If you want a field of labor, You can find it anywhere.

Reflections Of A Bachelor.

New York Press.

One way to get square with people is to get around them.

The surest way not to find trouble is not to go looking for it.

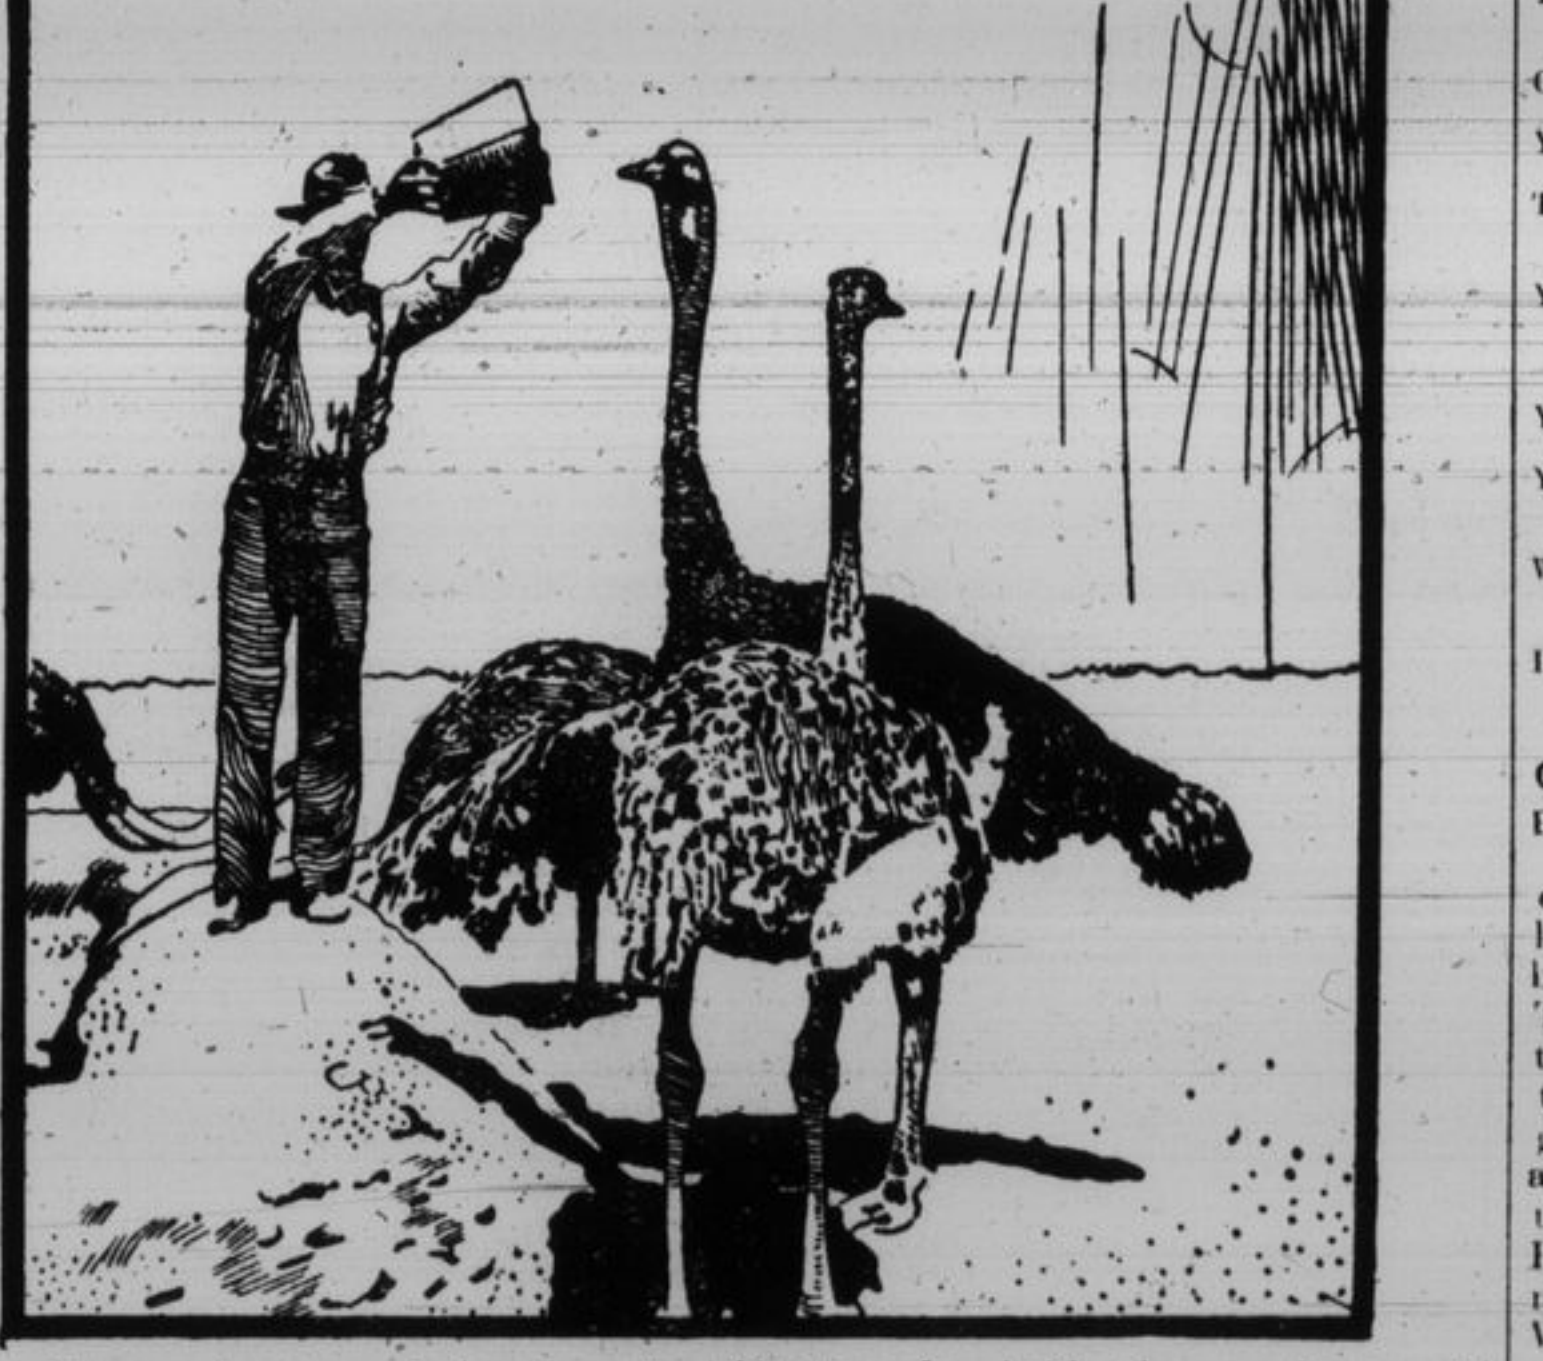

Usually the man who is at the head of the house is at the foot of the family.

Good, hot biscuits are a stronger argument for domestic peace than many sermons and harsh exhortation.

The first time a bride has a quarrel with her lord and master she asks him to forgive her; after that she asks him to ask her to forgive him.

Four new books are published to each fresh edition of an old one.

LIGHT LUNCH FOR OSTRICHS.

Ostriches are not precisely domestic birds, but thrive and prosper, perhaps to the surprise of many people, in the United States. You don't find them in the East but out in California, where the weather is always mild, they are raised in large numbers and at stated periods suffer the indignity of having their feathers pulled out and shipped to Eastern merchants.

Seventeen years ago Edwin Cawston, of Pasadena, Cal., took it into his head that the thrifty South Africans had top long had a monopoly of the ostrich business. It occurred to him that if he could establish a farm in California it would be a much better scheme than raising fruit or, in ranching, particularly as ostrich feathers were selling at a good, round figure in this country, thanks to the twenty per cent duty upon them.

After thinking the matter out Mr. Cawston quietly chartered a ship and set sail for South Africa. He bought fifty-two fine birds there and succeeded in landing forty-two in San Francisco. Ten died on the voyage. Since then the farm has thrived, and now the forty-two have increased to ten times that number, and their feathers are among the finest that come to the market.

It is no easy matter to take care of ostriches; they are at time vicious and can kick with such force that the kickees think a ten-storey building has fallen on him. The attendants have to be particularly careful. At one time of day they approach them with perfect complacency, and that is when they feed them.

They hold the buckets of feed at full arms' length, as shown in the picture, and Mr. Ostrich, who has been whetting his appetite on tin cans, circus posters, nails, glass and the like, wastes little time in getting away with his rations.
