A Big Glengarry Timber Limit. Lancaster, Ont., Oct. 3.—In this eastern part of Ontario fine timber land is a somewhat scarce commodity. However, there are still a few spots of bush land in old Glengarry which mill owners will offer tempting prices to obtain. This week the well known lumber firm of Southey, Lawless, Messrs. A. McArthur & Son, closed a contract whereby they obtained possession of 800 acres of timber land situated northwest of Martintown. The price paid was $12,000.

SPLENDID IMPRESSION

lawyers with whom he formerly associated, but when he can do so, it redounds to his credit. Justice Britton in his address to the Kingston bar members on Monday pointed out that no hedge should exist between judge and counsel, for the former always required the aid of the latter in interpreting the law. And so the most cordial feeling existed throughout the address between bench and bar, the lawyers on both sides being well satisfied with all rulings of his lordship. Justice Britton was remarkably fair, and his manner was much more pleasant than that of most judges who sit upon the bench. His return to hold court here will be welcomed.

NAPANEE NEWS NOTES.

Numerous Visitors in Town - A Handsome Store.

Napanee, Oct. 3.—Chief Adams, of Brockville, spent several days this week visiting his daughter, Mrs. H. Collier, Newburgh, and shaking hands with his numerous Napanee friends. The chief is kindly remembered by scores of Napanees. Mrs. James Scott, formerly Dora Cliff, and little son of New York, arrived last week to spend some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Cliff. William Kent left yesterday for Winnipeg. Mrs. James Elwell, who resides over the Dominion bank, lies at the point of death from a stroke of apoplexy. A. E. Rikely is visiting friends in Detroit this week. Mrs. (Dr.) Ming, John street, has been confined to the house for the past week with a severe cold.

The Guy Bros. were in town on Tuesday night, and as usual were greeted with a full house. The song recital, held in the Eastern Methodist church on Monday evening, was an unqualified success. A large audience greeted the popular baritone, Mr. Eaton, of New York, who was ably assisted by Miss L. M. Hall, of Napanee. Nothing but praise was expressed by all who had the pleasure of hearing the two talented musicians. The teachers' convention is in session this week. Quite a full attendance of teachers is present. The meetings are held in the assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute.

J. A. Cathro lies very near the point of death at his father's home in Lindsay. Friends say that no hope is entertained of his recovery. Irvine Parks, county treasurer, is able to be about again after being confined to the house for the past week with an attack of bronchitis. Charles Knight continues in a very weak condition. William Ferguson moved into his new barber shop, on John street, near Dundas street, this week. F. W. Smith & Bro. will also soon occupy their new premises on the corner of John and Dundas streets. They will have one of the finest jewelry shops in Eastern Ontario. They will have new fittings and when their complete stock is displayed, few city shops will be its equal.

A Pleasant Assembly.

The first weekly assembly of the season was given in Miss McGlade's dancing academy, William street, on Wednesday evening, with a very large attendance. Dancing was in progress until twelve o'clock, when refreshments were served, after which dancing was resumed and continued until nearly two o'clock, when the pleasant affair terminated, all present being delighted with the enjoyable time spent. Guests were present from Toronto and Brockville.

Who Is Responsible?

The county council committee on roads and bridges met Thursday morning to decide what action should be taken regarding a small bridge on the boundary of Portland and Camden townships, which is in a bad condition, and liable to cause an accident. The bridge, it seems, is private property, belonging neither to the county or the township. The committee, however, decided to visit the bridge before taking action.

warned of the danger of passing this legislation. But Mr. Balfour is firm, and so are his colleagues, and they are disposed to follow their inclinations and break all opposition. Defeat is promised by the non-conformists and their allies, and their agitators are most general and most active. And yet the government holds firmly to its purpose. It is acting on the presumption that whatever is bad for it will be bad for its successor, and its leader is bold because he is assured that there is no hope of a liberal government while the liberal party is disorganized. There is some force in the contention. The British opposition has been strangely disunited in recent years. It is in need of some one who can magnetize the forces and lead them by his mastery personality. The man is being sought for. Meanwhile the Balfour government is acting with more or less recklessness and in defiance of public opinion.

THE VALUE OF AUDITS.

It is offered, in mitigation of an official's deficiency in funds, that the government allowed him considerable latitude. Why? The books and accounts of every official should be carefully checked over by some independent person. The audit, to be of any value, should be searching. The effect is that carelessness to detail which finds expression usually in the "examined and found correct" of the auditors. The latitude given the Toronto official, who is said to be short in his funds $10,000, has led to his undoing. What precipitated the crisis we do not know. Nor does it matter. It is sufficient to observe that the strict surveillance of the auditor being removed the temptation to do wrong had the mastery, and one indiscretion was followed by another until the crash came. There can be no apology for a defalcation, nor for the absence of the audits that permitted it.

ONWARD MARCH OF WOMEN.

There is considerable strife between the young men and young women who are attending the western universities and as a means of stopping or ending it the proposition is to separate the students.

The conditions of the present are somewhat unexpected. Time was when the young women were encouraged to aspire unto higher education, and the longings of the first few, for knowledge beyond that which could be required in the high school and academy, was welcomed as a happy sign.

Now the rush to the universities is such that the authorities have decided that co-education is not wise, and that the men and women should be educated in different institutions.

It is alleged that the freshman class generally is a lively one, and that its members are more or less subject to the temperate corrections of the sophomores. The women are sometimes in the way. They cannot be dealt with like the young men and they cannot be ignored. Their refining influence is indispensable, but it is limited in the class room and college halls, and seems infinitesimal when there is occasion to indulge in the diversions of the day. In other words the ardour of the junior collegian has freer play when the girl student is not about.

Again the freshman class supplies the material which goes to the athletic teams and contends for honors on the football fields. The girls, generally, do not take exercise in violent form and they are becoming a large and exempted class. The captains of football teams have no use for them and would be happier if their places were filled by men. But the change is not possible, nor probable. Colleges do not exist primarily for the training of athletes, and some of them would do more for the education of the age if they suppressed the things that go towards a development of muscle rather than of mind.

The demand of the age is for a higher education for our girls, and it is bound to be satisfied. There may be reason for a separation of the sexes in the medical classes, but in the arts department there does not seem to be any strong argument against the coming of young men and young women. The fear is that the girls may usurp, in the long run, too many of the occupations which have been monopolized by the men. The future will see the women in greater evidence in every avenue that is open to them, and because they will have the education. They are generally more ambitious than the men.

DEFYING PUBLIC OPINION.

The campaign against the English education bill goes forward with very disturbing effects. The fight primarily is against the giving over of juvenile education to the church party.

The bill empowers the authorities to levy rates for the maintenance of the voluntary schools which have been maintained hitherto by donations and contributions, and provides that only one-third of the bodies who have the expenditure of the money shall consist of representatives of the paying public, the remaining two-thirds being the nominee of the Church of England, which owns practically the whole of the schools. This is held to be an invasion of the primary rights of the people to control their own life directly and freely in the important department of elementary and secondary education. It is further held to be an encroachment on the enjoyment and exercise of full liberty of conscience, the maintenance of constitutional law in the procedure of government, the efficiency of the people, the continuance of the people's schools and the complete equipment of the teaching profession and their deliverance from the dogmatic and ecclesiastical tests.

Within the Church of England itself there is a formidable opposition to the measure. It owes its existence to the belief that the prime minister, while entertaining no positive belief in the utility of the measure, has been influenced in the framing of it by the Bishop of Rochester, Lord Hugh Cecil, and other leaders of the extreme High Church party.

In many ways, and on many occasions, the government has been

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The mayoralty election will be exciting this year. All the candidates are not yet announced. So the report goes.

The increased attendance at all the colleges indicates that the people are in easier circumstances and able to indulge their desire for education.

There is a great run on the gas and coal oil stoves for heating purposes. Oil as fuel promises to supplant coal very largely. And the supply seems to be inexhaustible.

John Even's letters to the Globe reconciles one to the coal miners' side of the strike. The conditions of labor at the mines have been very oppressive. The Globe's enterprise is very much appreciated.

The Boers have come to Canada a little late to see the crops at their best. They will see enough, however, to satisfy themselves that this is a land to which some of them can trek with perfect safety.

Mr. Maclean, of the World, is understood to be again eager for a mayoralty contest. With Mr. Howland as a candidate for the third time there is no telling what the people may do. But they are not apparently looking in Mr. Maclean's direction.

The Ontario Phonetic Primer has been deauthorized, the work not being, as alleged, entirely Canadian. Certain illustrations were printed in New York. Cannot the work be done in Canada? The little book, barring this one defect, is a very superior work.

The Montreal Herald, an enlightened advocate of liberal politics, has entered upon its seventh year as an evening paper. It is bright, newsy, and attractive. Better still, it represents a public morality of which Montreal cannot have too much. More power to it.
