CALL AND SEE IT AT STRACHAN'S HARDWARE.

TOLD IN THE TWILIGHT.

This life of ours is a wild æolian harp of many a joyous strain; But through all there runs a loud perpetual wail, as of souls in pain.

Nothing is ever said about a politician of a public man, than that which was said by the Montreal Star a day or so ago in a leader on Sir Wilfrid, "he has the manners of a good heart"—not the manners of a courtier alone, or the good heart of a good man alone, but that exceeding, and all too rare combination of virtues, perfect manners without, and an upright heart within. We all respect and admire, the while we shudder with fear, I hope I'm not paradoxical—the sincere, and honest person, who knocks down our pet prejudices and tramples ruthlessly upon our feelings, but we'd admire him all the more, and fear him much less, if he didn't bump into us and lace us up on every possible occasion. On the other hand the man with the velvet glove manner, concealing the iron hand of deceit and ill-will, may make things run smoothly in his vicinity, but we don't trust him as far as we can see him, (if we do get hurt) and uncertainty in regard to even his truthful moments, and a general distrust lead us to clothe ourselves in an armour of concealment and defence, which is apt to have a touch of deception in its make-up. Manners make the man, still more the woman, and the society leader, or the woman of less note, of whom it were needless to say, will do more for her sex, and for generations to come, than all the women's clubs and organizations on the face of the globe.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Malcolm have left Kempsville to take up their residence in Pembroke.

Mrs. Longley, wife of Attorney-General Longley, of Nova Scotia, is dangerously ill at Annapolis Royal, of typhoid fever.

Mrs. Helen Gregory Fletcher and Mr. James H. McGill, of Vancouver, B.C., were married recently at Christ Church, St. Paul, by the Reverend C. Herbert Shutt. The only attendants were the bride's two little sons. Mrs. McGill was, I think, one of the first women to win an arts' degree in Canada, being one of the few daring ones to enter Trinity away back in the thirties of the last century. She got her bachelors' degree in '88 or '89. Since her graduation she has made a name for herself as a writer.

On Tuesday morning, the marriage of Miss Marion Isaacs, daughter of the late Mr. George D. Dickson, Q.C., of Belleville, to Mr. Frederick Macdonald Parke, Rev. Canon McNabb officiated, and a large number of friends and relatives were present at the ceremony. The bride, who wore a travelling costume of navy blue ladies' cloth and a gray hat, was given away by her brother, Mr. Angus Crawford Dickson, who recently returned from South Africa. Miss Sarah Crawford Dickson, who was gowned in crimson tulle and a white and black hat, was attended by Mr. E. A. Wallberg, C.E.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sapphire and diamond ring, the bridesmaid a ruby ring, and to the best man a solitaire opal ring. The honeymoon will include a trip to New York and other American cities.

Miss Josephine Robb, press agent of the "Hearts Aflame" company, and a bright New York newspaper woman, is at the Windsor, Montreal, this week.

The engagement is announced in Montreal, of Miss Winifred Savage, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Savage, 1125 St. Hubert street, to Mr. George Grier, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Grier, Redpath street.

Her Excellency returned to Ottawa from a short visit at Shelburne Farm, Vermont, where she and the governor-general, with several ladies, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Seward Webb. A large house party made up of English people and Americans was asked to meet them.

Miss Sheila Macdougall, of Toronto, is the guest of Miss Girouard, Ottawa.

The Reverend Mr. Baldwin, rector of the Anglican church at Mentone, and Mrs. Baldwin, who have been the guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. Gwynne, at Ottawa, left last Saturday, for Boston, from where they will sail for Europe.

Mrs. Britton will receive for the first time on Friday next, at her new home, 80 Spadina Road, and will be "at home" on subsequent Fridays.

A tea of women golfers from the Toronto Hunt Club, went up to Hamilton on Monday, winning from the members of the Hamilton Golf Club, by fourteen holes up. They were entertained at lunch by the ladies of the club, and also at afternoon tea, by Mrs. Braithwaite.

Mrs. Henry Osborne held her post-nuptial reception at Cluny avenue, Rosedale, on Tuesday afternoon. Her pretty party was of delicate and noble, with an overdress of pearl with lace applique, the bodice being made with an empiement of lace and pearl embroidery, a large pearl buckle being upals and diamonds.

The marriage of Mr. Percy Jarvis, son of Mr. Edgar Jarvis of Toronto, and Miss Lida Franke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Norcross Gilbert, son of Buffalo, will take place on Thursday, October 30th, in that city.

Mrs. A. S. Hardy is in Brantford, the guest of His Honor Judge and Mrs. Hardy.

Mrs. Montizambert, Ottawa, has been spending the week in Toronto, with her daughter, Mrs. Walker.

A woman whose daily struggle with the problem of variety in the principal dinner meat dish was the most trying, became part of her housekeeping routine one day and made a list for her own benefit of the different possibilities in this line which she could get from her own knowledge and from a study of one or two cook books. This she had typewritten and it proved of a most valuable nature. Speaking of it one day to her marketman, who served her as well as meat and poultry, he asked the privilege to have copies printed, which he sent out to his customers to their mutual advantage. The home-made list may be of

IN THE LITERARY WORLD.

Last Saturday's Whig contained a somewhat lengthy notice of Hon. James Young's reminiscences of "Public Men and Public Life in Canada."

It speaks of the stirring times of those anti-confeederation days, of fierce political strife and party rancour. The following poem, published in the Brockville Recorder, on September 11th, 1851, is from the pen of that paper's then editor, David Wylie, who figured prominently in the political events of those stirring days. He was a reformer of the old school, and anti-tyrant with the enthusiasm of a noble cause. The poem which follows gives one some idea of the height to which party feeling was then wont to rise:

Men of Canada, stirring, Stand not idly by and see Bigot tyrants seize your country, Fitted only for the free.

Grudge not to the men who ever Treated you with bitter scorn, Called you traitors, rebels, Catholics, Till your hearts were sorrow-torn.

Are your old deep wrongs forgotten? Sleeps the spirit of the past, When you remember, with confusion, From his power the tyrant cast?

Long ye mourned with sad sighings, Waiting for the coming hour, When the dawn would chase oppressors From their mind-enslaving power.

Let your might, which oft has broken, Rise in moral strength to combat Yet again your ancient foes.

Scathed, not dead, they live and threaten To enchain your mind and soul, When you remember, with confusion, From his power the tyrant cast?

Scathed, not dead, they live and threaten To enchain your mind and soul, When you remember, with confusion, From his power the tyrant cast?

Queen's Quarterly. "Queen's Quarterly," always a praiseworthy publication, excels itself in its October number. It is virtually a magazine of essays, treating principally on literary, historic, political and educational topics, with a few references to current events. It addresses itself to the educated and thinking classes of readers. It is a magazine of a serious character, and is bound to do a good work in the field of literature. This month Dr. J. W. Rogers contributes an interesting article on Bermuda, which he recently visited. Prof. Shortt's "Responsible Government in Canada," like all his other efforts, shows the marks of faithful research, deep thought and clever handling. He traces the movement, in clear and lucid manner, from its early days to Prof. Watson's reminiscences of "Thirty Years of Queen's University" will be found interesting to more than college graduates or Kingston citizens. C. F. Hamilton, of the Globe staff, contributes an excellent article on "The Canadian Militia," and E. J. Campbell, manager of the Canadian Paper company, deals with "Education and Practical Life." J. J. Harpell, one of Queen's clever students, discusses the opportunities for "University Men in Life Insurance." There are also many other good articles in the issue, some of them well illustrated. The magazine is issued from the press of the British Whig, and in style as well as contents is a credit to the college and the city.

"The New Thought." In these days when old beliefs are being shattered and when the Christian church is beginning to lose its hold upon the people, every new theory of religious life finds a ready coteries of followers, and numberless books are written in its favour. Many of the publications of this sort are filled with the veriest trash, an unintelligible conglomeration of words conveying no sensible idea. They are generally the product of fanatics or enthusiasts. Occasionally some man, broader-minded and more generous than the others, writes a book in which he gives his theory to the world, and at the same time tells the reader that if he has a different idea of things to retain it, as that will be the best for him. Such are the generous lines on which William Walker Atkinson has written "The Law of the New Thought," published by the Psychic Research company, of Chicago. It is a study of fundamental principles and their application. It was written to answer "the questions, 'What is the New Thought?' 'What does it mean?' 'What principles does it stand for?' 'How does New Thought differ from Old Thought?' It does answer these questions thoroughly and clearly. The definition of the New Thought is too long to quote here, but in a word it is the great wave of spiritual and psychic thought that is passing over the world, sweeping away bigotry, intolerance, creeds, etc., and bringing us liberty, brotherly love, tolerance, success, health, etc. The writer emphasizes the doctrine of the oneness of all, and tells in interesting manner why he believes in the immortality of the soul. He deals with the growth of consciousness and the soul's awakening, and prophesies the coming of the better day, when man's mind and soul shall have developed and reached a higher plane. While there are some things in the book that the average reader will not accept, there is, on the other hand, much that is truthful, helpful and inspiring. The author, unlike the majority of religious writers, attacks no other man's creed, but simply unfolds his own opinion of the New Thought. This book will be found very interesting to readers who pause long enough in their ambitious pursuit of fame, place or power to consider such great problems as life, death and the great Liberal Convention. Brantford Examiner. When the big liberal convention was held in Ottawa in 1893, and the platform was formulated on which the party made a successful appeal to the country in 1896, the understanding was that similar gatherings would be held from time to time so that the leaders of the party might be kept in close touch with the liberal electorate. Nearly ten years have elapsed since that time, during which Canada has made great progress, and political conditions, in many respects, have undergone considerable change. Is it not time for another convention?

COMPANION'S CHRISTMAS PACKET.

Can you think of a gift more certain to be acceptable than a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion? Is there any one, young or old, who, having once had the paper in his hands and looked through it did not wish to possess it for his very own? It is a gift which, far from losing its freshness as Christmas recedes into the past, grows more delightful, more necessary to one's enjoyment week by week.

If you wish to make a Christmas present of The Youth's Companion, send the publishers the name and address of the person to whom you wish to give The Companion, with $1.75, the annual subscription price. They will send to the address named The Companion's Christmas Packet, all ready for Christmas morning, containing the Christmas Number, The Companion Calendar for 1903, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, and subscription certificate for the fifty-two issues of 1903.

Full illustrated Announcement of the new volume for 1903 will be sent with sample copies of the paper to any address free. The Youth's Companion, 144 Berkeley Street, Boston, Mass.

Here And There. "The Story of King Arthur," by Howard Pyle, with his own illustrations, will begin in November. St. Nicholas. It will be a fitting companion to the author's "Robin Hood." It is not a recounting of old tales, but an entirely new series of picturesque, romantic stories woven about the old legend of the king.

Anise's is a much improved magazine, under the management and modelling begun with the October number. It is a fine fifteen cent proposition. The November issue contains thirty-nine distinctive features, including in its writers Robert Hitchens, Lloyd Osbourne, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Caroline Duer, E. S. Van Zile, Joseph C. Lincoln, Carolyn Wells, Dudley Osborne.

"He (the man who begins to see things as they are) sees truth in all sciences, all religions, all philosophies, but knows that none of them has all the truth. The truth is too great and large a thing to be held in one place or by any one person. All have a bit of it. When one realizes this, he sees the folly of the bickerings, jealousies, condemnations, prejudices and bitterness between people of differing beliefs. He recognizes that they are all looking toward the truth from different points of view—that all are doing the best they know how—all are reporting the truth as they see it. As the feeling of separateness drops away, so does the feeling of opposition and difference pass.—(The Law of the New Thought.)"

Courage among men is not so rare as people say. See how many of them marry! We love the women we find beautiful; we find beautiful the women we love. Married women are unfree match-makers; is this charity or revenge? It is difficult not to bite forbidden fruit, when the fruit itself is anxious to be bitten.

One way to attract women to religion is to persuade them that in Heaven they will be more beautiful than ever.—(Translated from "Notes and Impressions," by Gustave Vapereau.)

MARRIED IN MONTREAL. A Graduate of the Royal Military College. Montreal, Oct. 23.—A most fashionable wedding was solemnized yesterday in the church of St. John the Evangelist, assisted by the Rev. Arthur French, when Capt. Duncan Sayre Macdougall, Royal Engineers, now stationed in South Africa, son of the late Senator Macdougall, of Hamilton, and grandson of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, chief justice, was married to Miss Millicent Wolferstan Thomas, youngest daughter of the late F. Wolferstan Thomas, of Montreal, formerly general manager of the Molsons bank. The church was tastefully decorated.

The bridesmaids were Miss Millie Monk and Miss Eleanor Ewan, of Montreal, and Miss Hamilton, of Philadelphia, Pa. They wore dainty frocks of white crepe de chene trimmed with lace, made with tucks and squares of lace and tucked skirts with shot trains, and blue sashes. Their picturesque hats were of peru lace with plumes, and their bouquets of sunburst roses tied with blue ribbons. They all wore Royal Engineer brooches, the gift of the bridegroom.

The best man was Capt. Stephen Howard, of Toronto, and the usher, W. Kirkpatrick, of Kingston, Ont., son of the late Sir George A. Kirkpatrick, lieutenant-governor of Ontario; Claude Hickson, son of the late Sir Joseph Hickson; Dr. Turner, and Samuay, Carmichael, son of the coadjutor bishop of Montreal.

After the reception Capt. and Mrs. Macdougall left for a very brief trip before sailing for South Africa. Capt. Macdougall having received a cable to report at once.

The bride travels in a grey broad cloth tailor-made costume, with white revers embellished with lace, and a white silk blouse with lace, and a stylish grey heavier hat with green vines.

Capt. Macdougall's career since entering the army, has been brilliant and successful, adding his name to the list of Canadians who have brought the country into flattering prominence.
