The expense incurred by the government in providing for the Doukhobors returned to Yorkton, must, according to Mr. Smart, deputy minister of the interior, be borne by the Doukhobors themselves. There is an amount of upwards of $20,000 to the credit of these people now in the hands, of the officers of the department of the interior, and any outlay to which the department has been put in connection with the recent movement will have to be paid out of these funds. Mr. Smart thinks that the pilgrimage, in which between 1,300 and 1,400 Doukhobors took part, was due to the teachings of a few so-called leaders among the Doukhobors. The majority had little or no interest in it, but were persuaded to join those who or-
