

RHEUMATISM CURED

Pains in the small of the back, painful passing of urine, inflammation of the bladder, torpid liver, cloudy urine.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

Rev. Dr. I. Villars, a Prominent Methodist Divine, Says Warner's Safe Cure Cured His Rheumatism.

SANDWICH, Ill.—"After a delay of months to be sure that a cure of my rheumatism of over a year's painful suffering had been effected, I desire to assure you that so far as I know nothing of myself I am cured."

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is purely vegetable and contains no narcotic or harmful drugs. (Beware of so-called kidney cures full of sediment and of lead which are dangerous to take.)

Trial Bottle Free.

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder, and blood that Warner's Safe Cure will cure them, a trial bottle will be sent to every sufferer.

TOLD IN THE TWILIGHT.

O woman in our hour of ease, Capricious coy and hard to please, When pain and sickness rack thy brow, A minstrel sings, and thus—

Mrs. Patrick Campbell wears some stunning gowns in the play she is in just now, "The Joy of Living."

The notice was cut very square around the neck, with two straps of jet coming over the shoulders to hold it in place, while straight across the arms, leaving an open space between.

Another of Mrs. Campbell's gowns was a white lace one, covered with beads, with a white velvet design in flowers applied over the bodice.

The Retort Critical.

"Woman's work," says the frivolous damsel, with a toss of her head, "is never done."

"True," concedes the other parts of the sketch, "True, now that she is attempting to do man's work in so many lines."

erously murdered in South Africa, is attending Moulton College, Toronto. While Professor Clark, of Trinity College, was replying to the toast of "Our Empire" at the National Club banquet on Monday night, and was in the midst of an eloquent tribute to our mother tongue, which he said was more expressive than any other language, he was interrupted by a voice.

"What about the unspeakable Scot?" "The unspeakable Scot," replied Professor Clark without a moment's hesitation, "is, I suppose, the gentleman who was written about by the bawdy poet."

"Soft ginger bread—Four eggs, one cup molasses, one cup butter, one cup milk, one tablespoonful ginger, two cups brown sugar, three cups flour, or perhaps, a trifle more, if the batter seems thin, and one tablespoonful soda. Mix three teaspoonfuls of the soda in the molasses till the mass is yellow and frothy, add butter, creamed, milk, ginger, hour, etc., beat the fourth teaspoonful of soda into the whole and bake in a slow oven. N.B.—There is no mistake about the soda. You can use half butter, and half lard if you like."

A little hint from a writer in "Good Housekeeping" regarding the testing of coffee may help out somebody who knows good coffee when she tastes it in its liquid state, but doesn't under-stand just the sort of material needed for the making of a cup of this most stimulating beverage.

Madame Necker—Woman's tongue is her sword, which she never lets rest. Madame Emile de Girardin—What is still more rare than a silly woman is a generous woman.

Madame Ceclie Fee—If women took care of their minds as they do of their faces and figures the world would go much better.

Madame de Lambert—The head of a woman is a sponge saturated with prejudices.

Duchess of Orleans—The religion of women consists in serving God without offending the devil too much.

Mlle. De Scudery—Nine women out of ten make me feel ashamed of my sex.

Madame de Puyssieux—There are few married women who do not make their husbands jealous of bachelors.

Madame Charles Reybaud—There is not one woman in a hundred who takes care to be always amiable to her husband and to remain beautiful for his sake.

Stenora Riccoboni—Few women really love their husbands. A husband is always more or less attached to his wife.

Outia—Women spend their lives, tending to their toilette and sharpening their claws like cats.

In The Literary World.

Somebody did a golden deed; Somebody proved a friend in need; Somebody sang a beautiful song; Somebody said, "I'm glad to live!"

The borrower of a book faces two obligations: the first is—to read it immediately; the second is—to return it as soon as read.

The standard works, issued from the Oxford and Nelson press, Eng., in pocket edition, are very popular. They are printed on the finest Indian paper, and the type is remarkably clear.

The writer of the modern sensational novel must put forth special exertion if he is to maintain his position. If one can judge from the advance notices of publishing houses and the volumes already on the market, the writers of the modern close book are giving the novel a close race for first place.

There is something fascinating about the title of Charles G. D. Robert's new book of fiction, "The Kindred of the Wild," issued by the Copp, Clark Co., Toronto.

Rebecca Smith—A beautiful woman is almost always vain, extravagant, light-hearted and a dissipated coquette.

Madame D'Epiny—Men are not worth a great deal, but I am not sure that women are worth as much.

Cecile Fee—Do not take women from the bedside of those who suffer; it is their post of honor.

Madame De Rieux—In all unhappily-marriages, the fault is less the woman's than the man's, as the choice depended on her.

Madame Guizot—Women use their hearts as men do their brains—as the directing power of their lives.

Madame Brissot—Women are slandered for the same reason that stones thrown at trees loaded with beautiful fruit.

Madame Dimover—How better the world would be if women would only choose men who love them instead of preferring men whom they love!

Madame Michelot—For a woman renunciation is the perfume of the soul. There are women so good that the flowers sent to them by men can only be a faint idea of the fragrance that is left about people who have come in contact with them.

Madame De La Fayette—It is through the lips of women that the truth of civility passes.

Madame De Sausure—Women have been given a few faults by a thoughtful Providence that they might compete with man.

I cannot help thinking that the case for woman's defence would have been much stronger if it had been presented by men instead of women, adds the gallant Frenchman, who is one of our sex's most loyal and doughty champions.
