A GLOWING PROPHECY. By magnifying mannerisms, putting forward half-truths and in some cases, as is well known to the informed, publishing wholesale misrepresentations, the opposition press appears to have over-acted its part in dealing with the pilgrimage of a small part of our Doukhobor settlers. All this was, of course, not done to injure these simple unlettered peasant people, but was meant to reflect on the government in power. This part has, it appears, been over-acted, and now we find some of these recently unfair critics responding to more charitable impulses.

The Montreal Star says editorially: "It is not possible to withhold sympathy from these amiable fanatics. In an age defined as 'destitute of faith and afraid of reason,' they evince the heroic quality of believing with all their hearts, making nothing of property in comparison, and risking their lives in following the 'Glean.'" It would be narrow to judge them solely by our commercial standards, to condemn them utterly because they are so strangely unbusiness-like, to conclude too hastily that they can never be valuable to the country and the world. They are no collection of lazy fakirs, affecting religious transport as a method of sponging their way through life, but industrious, temperate, chaste, honest and only too-high minded. It is very possible that a strain of that enthusiastic blood may lift the future of Canada above the slough of materialism, breed us many a seer, many a poet, many a man with courage to stand in the gap when colder spirits fail."

Will this glowing prophecy be fulfilled? Then the country and the government is to be congratulated on having extended hospitable welcome to this cruelly proscribed people. The Star's bright prediction is in full harmony with the testimony and expectations of every one who has gone among them and had experience of their simple hospitality, their ideal home life and the upright character that is found to be all but universal among them. That they have much to learn from us no one denies, but still more important lessons are taught by their example, that Canadians may well make careful note of. Let us not close our eyes 'lest we may see, nor our hearts, lest we may understand.

COST OF SCHOOL SUPPLIES. The Board of Education has not been un mindful of the complaint that the fees collected on account of books and supplies in the public schools, have been too high. It was not presumed to supply all that the scholars required. The text books, outside of the readers, were supposed to be dispensed with, and in their place expensive note books were put in. The plan was to dictate notes, which the pupils wrote down, read over and memorized.

But it has been found that both the text books and note books have been in use in the advanced classes. In addition the scholars have been in the habit of memorizing the notes and reciting them literally. In that manner they have been getting a superficial knowledge of things. For these reasons there has been an affitration for a change, and the board, at its last meeting, decided upon it. It will not involve any financial burden. Toronto has what is called the free book and supply system, but the goods are not free. They are purchased out of the taxes and appropriation made for the purpose. The outlay the first year was about $10,000. Ottawa is adopting the same system at an initial expense of $7,100. Hamilton has the fee system, and Kingston has had it for several years. The only difference here will be the adaptation of Toronto's books and supplies to Kingston's fee system, and under circumstances which will make the proceeding quite acceptable.

The school fee will be continued, as it is, and without any material modification for the present. At the same time the supplies will be cut down, so that in the course of a short time, three or four years, the classes will have all the text books they need. Then the fee will be reduced materially. The board and the teachers become the custodians of the books and by care and economy make them last for several years. The saving will be an appreciable one to the school population. The change could be made and the fee cut down at once with the money on hand with which to inaugurate it. But it was not deemed expedient to go to the council for funds at the present time. The reports of the board and its officers, and the committee on school management, should be carefully read by those who are interested in the subject. The information they contain will enable the ratepayers to reach an intelligent conclusion, and it will no doubt be in support of the action of the school trustees.

A GROUNDLESS IMPLICATION.

The Ottawa Citizen comments upon the delations of McDougall, ex-solvent of the Ontario Treasury Department, and observes: "There is something radically wrong with a method of transacting public business when such a case could be possible. That is one reason why the Citizen urges that after thirty years of uninvestigated operation by one lot of politicians it is about time the whole of the departments at Toronto were overhauled and their accounts audited under the auspices of another political party. Would it not appear, even to the Whig, that this would be good business?" No, it is not a question of governmental astuteness but a question of official routine. Under a conservative government as well as under a liberal government an official is liable to go wrong, and the only thing needful, as the Whig has pointed out, the only thing possible, is a close, rigid and exacting audit. This audit can be had under any party and without a change of government. The Ottawa Citizen implies that there would be some terrible revelations if Mr. Whitney and his political associates had the chance to personally investigate things. It is only an implication, however, and there is no ground for it.

DISEASE IN THE SCHOOLS.

A corps of medical men have been at work in New York, among the school children, and have excluded, out of over a million they have examined, about twenty thousand, who have been sufferers from parasitic, contagious and skin diseases. The revelation in some cases has been astonishing and the prompt action of the examiners has guarded against the spread of disease in the schools. The conclusion of the whole matter is that it should be the duty of school boards everywhere, to protect the health of children as well as provide for their education.

In this connection comment has been made upon the singular indifference of parents. They have been unfamiliar, in thousands of these New York cases, with the physical condition of their children, and have not expressed surprise when their attention has been called to it. The feeling is that the home has not been attentive enough to the children, and to the expedients that should be resorted to when the defects of persons have been discovered.

Teachers are required to be very observant, and to insist upon the retirement of children who show evidence of contagious diseases in any form. But they cannot see the marks and scars which are under the clothing, and so cannot be aware of conditions which sometimes exist. This has been made especially evident in Kingston recently. A skin disease has appeared, one that is new here and contagious, and that has affected many persons.

Under the direction of the chairman of the Board of Health the sufferers have been excluded, perhaps not all of them, because only a close personal inspection would make that possible. Parents, however, can assist in the service, and in such a way as to make the work of the health department effective.

EDITORIAL VIEWS.

C. C. Robinson is nibbling at the mayoralty post in Toronto. His only qualification is that he is a talkative young man, and a conservative.

Because men cannot be hired to dig them out thousands of sugar beets in Waterloo county are being left in the ground to rot. Are there no idle men in Canada!

The Brantford Expositor hopes Hon. Mr. Biggs had the premier's consent to quote his conversation in Kingston. It is likely he had, though the matter as introduced left a doubt for the point.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is at the Hot Springs, in Arkansas, for the benefit of his health. The prayer is that he may quickly recover, and return to Canada long to adorn the exalted position which he occupies.

The Imperial government is said to be contemplating some action which will draw the colonies and the mother country together. There can be no unity in conditions where the member of the family is not treated any better than the visitor or stranger.

The Hamilton Spectator nominates Hon. Mr. Ross for the lieutenant governorship of Ontario. It is a high office for one who, in conservative opinion, has been a dreadful failure in public life. The Spectator pays the premier a great compliment.

The Ontario Medical Council has decided to make honor-nitritions on the basis of entrance to the study of medicine and for a five years' course. The government may have to interfere again as it did before. The council is gradually becoming a very exclusive body.

so long content without this school reform.

H. Gaylord Wilshire ran in West Elgin, as a candidate for the legislature, in New York, with the same result. But he has discussed his socialistic schemes, and done something to educate the masses. He is easily satisfied.

The federal bye-elections take place on December 1th in Maisonneuve, (Hon. Mr. Prefontaine's seat), Yarmouth, (vacated by the appointment of Mr. Flint as clerk of the commons), and Arceville, (opened by the death of Dr. Christie). They will probably elect liberal members.

Did not the Canadian ministers inflict Canadian sentiment before the colonial conference? The Ottawa Citizen says they did not speak for the majority. Parliament represents the whole peoples and it will speak in their behalf when it meets, and the government will be endorsed.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Sherlock Holmes" was Admirably Produced. The production of "Sherlock Holmes" at the Grand Opera House last night received the encomiums of the fair-sized audience that had the good fortune to witness this excellent drama, which portrays an episode in the life of Conan Doyle's master-mind detective-his connection with the strange case of Alice Faulkner. The beautiful and accurate staging and the strong company make the presentation appear remarkably natural. Finer stage appointments have seldom been seen here.

Herbert Kealey is a complete success in the title role, and won many well-deserved plaudits and curtain calls. Miss Effie Shannon has an emotional part as "Alice Faulkner," and acts so naturally that an ordinary audience would be apt to think it trifling. But quite the opposite-it is the triumph of an artist. Several fine bits of dramatic acting are seen in the role of "Pro Moriarty," for which David Davies is worthily responsible. Miss Lorina Atwood, a stage beauty, cleverly shows the tiger instinct of a bad and scheming woman. All the other parts are filled by a strong cast. The orchestral music was especially good.

Theatrical Notes.

Rice's "Show Girl" is at the Montreal Academy this week. Twenty-five years ago Lewis Morrison and James O'Neill were in the role of "Kerry Gow," a play still on the stage.

"The Sign of the Cross" is at the Toronto Grand this week. The great spectacular production "Ben Hur" is at the Princess. The "Sherlock Holmes" company left this morning by special G.T.R. train for Ottawa, via Cornwall. Next week the company plays in Montreal.

The Tom Marks Stock company will be at the Victoria theatre in February next. His former leading lady, Miss Esther Evans, the pretty blonde over whom a Napanee young man attempted suicide here, is not with the company this season.

Commenting upon the musical comedy "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," the Montreal Sun says: "The only weak point in the book, which needs some alteration to make the show go better, for, as it is now, people leave the theatre with a feeling of disappointment-a feeling that they have seen a very good entertainment, but withal there is something wanting-something that is not quite satisfactory, something has not gone quite as it should do. If the book were improved upon this feeling would not be there."

Lived On Wolfe Island.

Cape Vincent Eagle. Mrs. Eliza Erwin, of 199 Liberty street, Cleveland, Ohio, writes to Policeman Frank Wiley to ascertain the whereabouts of her brother, William Launderville, who is about sixty-five years of age. She has not seen him or heard from him in about thirty-two years. When last heard from he resided on a farm on Wolfe Island, was married, and had a son and a daughter, named respectively, Andrew and Emma. If any person knows his residence they will confer a great favor by notifying Mrs. Erwin without delay.

Extensive Improvements.

Tweed News. Some extensive improvements are being made along the line of the Bay of Quinte railway between Tweed and Yarker. A large gang of men and teams are employed cutting down a heavy grade north of Enterprise, a lot of ballasting has been done, and several of the station houses are being filled in, and levelled up. The company is to be congratulated upon the way the stations and the roads in general is kept up.
