LESSONS OF A TRIAL.

The Molinex case is still the subject of much public discussion in New York. The gratitude of the family is expressed through General Molinex, who spent over $100,000 in the two trials of his son. The public, he assumes, has been of his mind all along as to the innocence of Roland Molinex, and certainly the old man has elicited great sympathy in the diminished and reserved manner in which he has carried himself.

The New York Evening Post concurs in the verdict of acquittal of the prisoner and dwells upon the benefit that must follow the contradictions of expert testimony, and the lesson or moral which they convey. A woman was poisoned by a drug which was addressed through the mails to a friend, but it is not apparent that the sender of the drug was evilly minded. The evidence indeed is leaning towards a new conception, namely that the drug originally may have been healthy and became a poison by decomposition.

The suffering in the case—and by innocent persons, especially by a father and a wife—has been due to wrongly founded suspicion. Roland Molinex had not been particular in his early associations. He had been an exile because of indiscretions that were recalled and revived by the Adams death. These indiscretions may have been repented of, but the atonement was not complete. Perhaps Molinex's experience may not be for naught in the lives of others. It has been expensive, heart-breaking, crushing, and it will never be forgotten by friends. John B. Gough's farewell words are appropriate, "Young man, keep your record clear."

A PLUMBING EXPERT.

The Board of Health has declared in favour of an inspector of plumbing. It did so because the complaints were numerous that unsanitary conditions prevailed in and around many houses, that the health of the people was being seriously affected, and that relief could only come when some one could be appealed to for advice.

The question has been asked, Has the city not some one in its employment who could act as inspector of plumbing from time to time? The engineer is competent, but he has already all the labour he can attend to, and others are engaged under him in giving the needful supervision to the public works. The water works officials, who are competent, may safely plead that they have enough to do without coupling their department with the health department. The sanitary inspector is also the city assessor and city commissioner and has already more duties assigned to him than he or any other man can reasonably discharge. The medical health officer is not giving all his time to the city and may not be inclined to do it. Granted that he were willing, for a consideration to assume the functions of a plumbing inspector, can he qualify? Medical men understand the theory of sanitation, but a medical man would not be tolerated by the master mechanics and skilled workmen when it came to dictating to them what they should or should not do.

The health department has done its duty in calling the attention of the council to the need of the hour, and the council may appoint whomever it likes. The inspector must be an expert mechanic, and the man may be found who, for the fees connected with the occasional service, will do the work required by him well, and without adding to the taxation of the city.

THE VOTE ON DEC. 4TH.

The interest is developing in the vote which will be taken on December 4th, and which will settle the question to whether the Ontario Liquor Act will be enforced. In language, in aim, in purpose, it is like unto the Manitoba Liquor Act which was pronounced by the Privy Council to be within the powers of the province to enact. The reference to the people is to ascertain whether a substantial majority of them approve of it, such a majority as will warrant the conviction that it will be observed, obeyed, and respected.

The Ontario Liquor Act is not a prohibition measure. It does not stop manufacture and traffic in liquor, but simply limits the conditions under which it may be handled and used. It closes the bar-rooms of taverns, hotels and restaurants, and forbids the sale of intoxicants as a beverage within the province. A man may import liquor from the United States, or from some other province, for his own use and benefit, but he is confined, in the quantity he orders or handles at any one time to twelve bottles. The only sales, legitimately, will be made, (should act be enforced), through druggists, who shall dispense it, under re-restrictions, for scientific, industrial and sacramental purposes. Records of all sales must be kept and no liquor will be drunk upon the premises in which it is purchased.

The voters will be those who exercised the franchise in the last legislative election, and those who have since resided in the province. The act will become effective if 213,012 persons answer yes to the question upon the ballot paper, or a majority of the 426,083 votes which were cast in the provincial election in 1898.

The prohibitionists and the anti are warning up to their work, and will make the incidents of December 4th as lively as possible.

GROSSLY EXCEEDED POWERS.

The police board of Toronto finds a sergeant and four men guilty of attacking the body of students on All Hallows' eve without occasion or provocation; declares that the students "were obeying the request to disperse promptly"; that they offered no resistance and "showed exceedingly good temper and self control," yet "the sergeant and several of his men plied their whips on the shoulders of the students as they were scattering."

The police commissioners add that the violence was an unwarrantable abuse of powers, and apologized to Prof. Reeve and his associates and to his students for the offence.

The riding down of retreating students by mounted police with reckless use of whips reads like a Russian report rather than an emanation from a civilized land. It has given Toronto a name for administrative brutality which will proclaim it a city for parents to avoid in choosing a place for education of their sons. The police board had the opportunity of redeeming the good name of the place by adequate punishment. Mere fines are a travesty of justice. The sergeant in charge, who set a disgraceful example, will forfeit only $21. The other three convicted men are fined $6 each, with some loss of good conduct pay. This probably will be restored later on, to complete the farce.

Police are given great powers of control and imprisonment, and when these powers are grossly exceeded, as in this case, it is an outrage of the worst kind, a cowardly abuse of that justice, which the people must respect if good order and loyalty are to be preserved. Not one of the convicted men should have been allowed to remain on the force. They are not the only persons, however, unworthy to fill a responsible trust. The members of the Toronto police board share with them the distinction.

HOME LOYALTY COSTS.

The suit brought against the officers of the Locomotive Works brings into public view Hon. William Hart's attachment to Kingston. While the newspapers have again and again been giving out rumors, with no lack of imaginative detail, of the proposed removal of the establishment to other cities, it was an established fact that Kingston was its permanent home, the question having passed beyond the realm of discussion. That this loyalty to the city is not met in fitting spirit is no credit to public feeling as expressed by actions of representative bodies. The charges of unappreciative treatment made by Mr. Hart a few days since are, unfortunately, unanswerable.

It is an open secret that when the first strike occurred at the works, Mr. Haney, a large stockholder, advocated removal to Montreal. He had never before, in a long career of contractorship and employment of men, encountered a strike, and he desired, in addition to more modern works and an escape from the Grand Trunk charge of $250 per engine to deliver at Montreal, to locate in a big city where the supply of men would be greater and where strikes are not a ready resort. Other shareholders agreed with him earnestly, and Mr. Hart stood almost alone in his resolution to stand by Kingston. It came to a crucial point: the shareholders had either to buy him out or continue to operate here. They could not very well do without the master spirit and originator of the enterprise, and the works have remained. Mr. Hart not only lost an old friend and able colleague, but the breach has widened into a strong opposition. Mr. Haney is at the head of a powerful company about to locate in Montreal, with undoubted advantages, while to its rivalry is added the unpleasantness of legal dispute over Mr. Haney's interests in the old company. Mr. Hart's loyalty to the city is a very handsome return for the confidence it has expressed in him and for honors conferred. It will hereafter be rated perhaps more fairly and generously.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Kindergarten teaching has received a great stimulus in the United States, by New York City the salaries begin at $600 and increase to $1,000 a year.

In Patrie objects to the transfer from the public works department to that of marine of the harbor and river improvements. The change, however, is generally approved.

The Rogers telephone scheme has been revised in Hamilton. The projector has astonished the people with the cheapness with which he proposes to supply the plant and run the service.

The Grand Trunk engineers have been given their increase of wages. It runs from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. The Grand Trunk and C. P. R. engineers are row among the best paid mechanics on the continent.

The minister of inland revenue, Hon. Mr. Bernier, is doing what he can to have the metric system adopted in Canada. The one thing desired will be the education of the people in regard to it. The campaign cannot be hurried.

The Journal raves because only three weeks are given in which to work up the fight against the government in the bye-elections. How long would Le Journal suggest? Three months? The conservative party was supposed to be ready for any emergency.

A contemporary says the issue before the people is prohibition or no prohibition. No, it is not that. The issue is the license system or prohibition in a limited form, that is limited by the powers of the province as expressed in the Ontario Liquor Act.

The Winnipeg Telegram accepts the declaration of Industrial Canada, that the liberal government has tried to satisfy the manufacturers, and declares that this confirms Mr. Eorden's statement that he is not up with them. Has anyone suspected to the contrary?

Want It Explained And Enforced.

The retail merchants' association, at the last meeting of the city council, asked for a conference to discuss the transient traders' by-law. An official of the association states that the merchants desire an interpretation of the by-law; they want to know exactly what it means, and then to have it rigidly enforced. They affirm that the by-law has been broken several times recently, and that their interests demand its enforcement. The merchants will also probably ask that the license of a local firm of auctioneers be taken away.

It is likely they will be proceeded against.
