I do not see that in itself it need involve any political change. The newcomers will probably be content with our institutions, which are fully as good as those they leave behind. The rush of American population into the North-West and British Columbia affords matter for more serious reflection. It was certain that when th land in the United States had been taken up, as most of it has now been, there would be an overflow of population into our far western provinces, and that those provinces would large ly become American. The builders of the C.P.R., who stretched out Canada to the Pacific, may thus have been instrumental in bringing about politica results which they neither desired nor foresaw. Sir George Cartier solemnly vowed that no American should ever have anything to do with the C.P.R.

Chancellor James R. Day, of Syracuse university, in a recent address upon "Belief in the Bible," spoke somewhat at length upon the value of the mystery of this book. He said in part : "A Bible that can be perfectly comprehended by the human intelligence cannot carry the conviction the human heart that it is the word of God. Mystery is the Bible's divine credential. The normal, growing mind demands mystery as the background for its sustained effort. The man who contends that he cannot believe that which he cannot comprehend is the victim of a primary blunder in mental operation. The tree, the flowers, the fruit, are visible signs of a veritable kingdom of mystery. In fact, every problem solved brings into view wider range of thought over wider fields of mystery. Mystery is stamp of the infinite upon the Bible It is in this atmosphere of miracle, of parable, of unfathomable type, of poetic sentiment, of soul-awakening prophecy, of uninterpretable emotion, that the soul communes with God." Too Many People Dally With Ca-
