WEST'S DEMAND.
Must Look to Ontario and Quebec For Supply.

Toronto, Dec. 6.—A North West correspondent calls attention to the increasing demand for school teachers in the territories. He points out that on December 31st, 1898, there were 579 districts in the territories, and in the past four years new districts have been organized as follows: 1899, 51; 1900, 49; 1901, 52; 1902, about 110. It is estimated that 250,000 teachers will be required for 1903, and last year 150 Ontario teachers went west.
The average salary paid is $15 a month. The west must look to Ontario and the eastern provinces to supply her increasing demand for teachers, and as there are good opportunities for energetic and ambitious young men and women, doubtless many Ontario and Quebec teachers will find their way to the Golden West.

THE CITY GIFT

Of New Arts' Building To Queen's HANDED OVER.

PRESENTATION MADE BY MAYOR SHAW.

Sir Sandford Fleming Accepts the Building on Behalf of the Trustees—Address Made by Rev. Dr. Campbell Touching the Installation of the Late Principal Grant.

A ceremony that will find prominent mention in the domesday book of Queen's University and in the municipal records of Kingston took place Friday evening. It was the formal presentation of the new arts' building to Queen's University and the handing over of the building to the trustees of the late Principal Grant. The day had a two-fold significance, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the late Principal Grant's installation, and the day when the new principal, Rev. Dr. Gordon, was appointed.

The presentation took place in the large mathematics room of the new building, before a large assembly, which included members of the board of trustees and city council. After the invocation by the chaplain, Rev. Dr. Campbell, the Mayor, Mr. Shaw, who was invested with his chain of office, referred to the alacrity of the city council in submitting a bonus by-law to the people, when Principal Grant called for civic assistance in his endeavor to increase the bounds of the university. When a bid, which favored the $50,000 bonus, by a vote of three to one.
The Mayor, when he had, his words said he had registered at Queen's under the name of Prof. Dupuis, whom he was happy to still see in academic harness. As chief magistrate he was glad of the close relation between town and gown, and of the fact that the city had no trouble with the students, as Toronto in their midst, notwithstanding the fact that they robbed them of their daughters. (Laughter.)
In conclusion Mayor Shaw said: "It gives me great pleasure, Mr. Chancellor, to formally hand over this building to yourself and your board of trustees. (Applause.)"
Sir Sandford Fleming, on behalf of the trustees and aldermen, standing while he spoke as follows:
"On the occasion of the presentation of this building, the magnificent gift of the people of Kingston, the board of trustees of Queen's university desire to place on record their deep sense of the generous and enlightened liberality, which has found appropriate expression in this very practical and useful form.
"The gifts of private citizens have at all times in the history of the university marked and stimulated her progress. The names of Caruthers, Doran, Watkins, and many others of our citizens must always be associated with the remarkable growth and development of Queen's.
"Those splendid examples of private beneficence are now followed by an act of the municipality which may be characterized as unique. In the history of education in Canada there is no similar instance. The corporate body of the city of Kingston, in the first place among the municipalities in the Dominion in its distinguished regard for the mental elevation of our people, and it is with sincere gratitude that the trustees accept the gift which to-day is formally offered by the Mayor, on behalf of the whole body of citizens.
"It is with singular appropriateness, Mr. Mayor, that you have selected this day, the 5th of December, 1902, to present this building to the university, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the installation of our late principal, the man who for a quarter of a century guided our destiny, and whose strenuous life was devoted to the advancement of the university and to the promotion of the cause of education in Canada.
"On behalf of the trustees, I accept this magnificent gift from the city of Kingston." (Applause.)
Sir Sandford then announced that there were present several gentlemen who attended the installation of Principal Grant exactly twenty-five years ago that afternoon and evening. The chaplain was one, and Rev. Dr. Campbell was called upon to address the assembly. He stated that though there was a element of sadness in connection with the quarter century anniversary of the late Principal Grant's installation, it should not be made a time of mourning, for if the "voice" that was still "could be present, he would not have it so. We should feel that Principal Grant's life was a fully rounded life, and thank God that "he was." Dr. Campbell recalled that fact that at the installation on December 5th, 1877, he had designated Principal Grant as the "king of men," and had followed him as his leader from that time till his death, nor did he ever have occasion to regret the appellation. That there was such an array of university buildings in the opening years of the twentieth century never entered into the heads of those who were present at the installation long ago. In those days, Principal Grant had the reputation of being a "wild" man, and many people doubted the wisdom of the college trustees in calling him as head of Queen's. But time proved the wisdom of the board.

In conclusion, Dr. Campbell said it was a happy circumstance that on this date, Queen's trustees should have chosen another principal, one of those radiant spirits, and who was present on that memorable day when Queen's received an infusion of new life. He was sure that the judgment of Queen's trustees in appointing Dr. Gordon would be justified in the years to come, with as much satisfaction as that of the dearly beloved principal who had passed to rest.

E. W. Rathbun, Deseronto, also spoke. He remembered the feeling of pride felt by the people of the Bay of Quinte district two years ago over the liberality of the citizens of Kingston whom all thought had acted so wisely. He trusted that Rev. Dr. Gordon would receive the same generous support accorded to Principal Grant, and hoped that the gift of the new arts' building would redound to the credit of Kingston, and that the action of the latter would be a fitting example to the district to aid Queen's more in the future than had been done in the past.
The pronouncement of the benediction by the chaplain, the people inspected the building, the rooms of which were all thrown open. Music was discoursed by the 14th Regimental band and Mr. Arthur's orchestra.

On a charge of forgery the lieutenant was sentenced to four years in prison, and when he secured his discharge he made it a life work to accomplish the rescue of his loved princess. BOWLES' ACT

Called Attention To The Sugar Question

BALFOUR'S VIEW
CALLED ON CABINET TO HOLD PEACE.

Liberals Thanked Mr. Bowles for Raising the Question—Imperfect Translation of the Convention—Lord Rosebery Spoke on the Education Bill.

London, Dec. 6.—In the House of Commons, yesterday, Thomas Gibson Bowles, member for Lynn Regis, called attention to the sugar question in connection with the Brussels agreement. Mr. Bowles said that since the house approved the Brussels convention ten days ago and gave the government power to ratify it had been found that the most important article in the convention—the one concerning its duration—was incorrectly translated, while the translation of the other articles was faulty, in many other respects. Under these circumstances he urged that the government should reconsider its position. Mr. Bowles concluded by accusing the government of equivocating in regard to the subject.

Mr. Balfour, the prime minister, replied by characterizing the action of Mr. Bowles as absolutely unprecedented and most improper and advised the members of the cabinet to refrain from participating in the debate.

The matter was not allowed to drop until after Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and other liberals made speeches, in which they declared that Mr. Bowles deserved the thanks of the house and the country for raising the question.

The debate on the education bill, in the House of Lords, last night, would have been very dreary, but for the intervention of Lord Rosebery, who vigorously denounced the principle of the measure. He demanded a two-thirds popular control for the schools and declared that the supporters of the voluntary schools reminded him of the children of Gilead, who had imposed on Joshua with their rags and mouldy bread. The government scheme was not a national system of education.

The brilliant speech of Lord Rosebery, which was heard with frank enjoyment by the whole house, was followed by a fierce, intense utterance of Lord Halifax. Just before midnight the Duke of Devonshire wound up the debate and at 12:30 o'clock the bill was read a second time in the upper house, by 117 votes to 37.

The British claims against Venezuela cannot be ascertained from parliamentary papers or official sources. The aggregate bill of damages is believed to fall considerably below that presented by the German government. The accounts taken together will, however, justify the seizure of the customs of two of the chief Venezuelan ports. Experts familiar with the trade of Venezuela under normal conditions point out that the customs revenues are chiefly derived from the imports of flour from the United States and Canada, and the exports of coffee to the same markets, and that the seizure of the customs of the settlement of the British and German claims would involve the payment of just debts through the duties levied upon commerce from and with the two countries named.

Neither here or at Berlin can anything official be ascertained concerning the impending action of Great Britain and Germany in the matter of their claims against Venezuela. The Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post asserts that the British and German ultimatums, in practically identical form will be delivered simultaneously, perhaps, on December 6th, and December 8th, and only President Castro's unconditional acceptance, accompanied by adequate guarantees for the fulfillment of the demands, will avert naval action.

Heavy weather is reported from various parts of Europe. There was a slight fall of snow in London, yesterday, accompanied by a very keen wind. The cold is severe throughout the country and a blizzard prevailed in Kent. In Paris the cold is intense and there have been two deaths from exposure. There has been a heavy fall of snow in the Charente district in many places a foot deep. A strong northeast gale prevails off the port and there are grave fears for the safety of the fishing fleet.

Sir Hiram Maxim, of the firm of Vickers, Sons & Maxim, will sail shortly for the United States where he intends to remain for about two years, primarily to try by breathing his native air—the is a native of Maine to cure a troublesome throat complaint and to prosecute experiments with the view to building a flying machine. He says that if he does not build an air ship himself it is quite possible that he may become a consulting engineer on the subject for other parties.

A despatch to the Daily Mail from St. Petersburg says that Philippe, who is said to have extraordinary influence over the czar, and who it was recently reported here had been banished from the court, has returned to Livadia, where the court is now sojourning, and is entertaining their majesties and the courtiers with spiritualistic seances.

The idea of a building to serve as a home for the Irish societies originated with the board of trustees of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.
