The Champion Condemned Death as a Yearling.

Chicago, Dec. 16.-A complete history of Cresceus, the champion trotter, is given out for the first time by George H. Ketcham, breeder and driver, and is as follows:

I was led to buy Mabel, Cresceus' dam, through seeing Nightingale as a four-year; old step a mile in 3:27, cember 31st, 1902, and January 1st, which I then considered a very wonderful performance. Shortly after purchased Robert McGregor, and the following year Mabel was bred to him.

As a yearling, Cresceus had a severe attack of epizootic and was blistered. UNDER ARMS

LOOKING FROM QUEBEC ON CHRISTMAS DAY 1775

The Volunteers at Prescott on Christmas Day, 1865-Ready For the Intended Raid-The People in Fear.

Written For the Whig.
That day, which of all days seems fraught with the spirit of peace, has been more than once in the few centuries of Canadian history, associated with war's horrors and alarms, and celebrated under the shadow of battle. On Christmas day, 1775, the peo-ple of Quebec looked out from a besieged citadel towards an invading army under Montgomery, whose sands of life had almost run. Later, in 1837, the spirit of unrest was abroad; caused by the Patriot's army, which on Christmas day occupied Navy Island; and nearer still to our own time, and recalled by the recent recognition of their services, the volunteers, now known as the veterans of '65, were under arms to repel the threatened Fenian raids. The mutterings and boastings of these misguided, if patriotic, Irishmen, had resulted in the call to arms issued in November, 1865, and the volunteers had responded gladly. In most companies no man was missing. an act of sacrifice better comprehend ed when it is remembered that many. if not most, exchanged a wage of $2 to $5 a day for the twenty cents a day of the volunteer.

On Christmas day, 1865, the fort at Prescott was occupied by two companies of sixty-five men each. That from Morrisburg had its quarters on the ground floor, and the Ottawa building some eighty feet square, stood on six acres of ground at one end of the town, surrounded by wooden palisades and earthworks. In front the St. Lawrence, three miles wide, had on its farther shore the American towns of Ogdensburg and Malone. The mayor of Malone was in hearty sympathy with the Canadians, and had promised to notify them by means of rockets, of any intended raid. This fact caused an exciting incident later, when, suddenly, at two o'clock of a cold winter morning, arose the sentry's cry, "One rocket. companies were under arms, and in
